

A Dollars-And-Cents Look At 'Staying' In Park District

by STEVE BROWN
A News Analysis
To stay or not to stay, that is the question. Whether it is nobler to remain in the Hoffman Estates Park District or disannex.

because, while it is part of the Hoffman Estates Park District, it is also within the Village of Schaumburg. This fact was generally unknown until shortly before the district's June 10 referendum. It was then residents learned they were in the district and decided to vote against the referendum, hoping to stop an accompanying tax increase while they decided if they wanted to stay in Hoffman Estates, disannex and remain independent, or disannex and join the Schaumburg Park District.

So far no decision has been made. It appears there is a good chance the problem that occurred with the June referendum may occur again this fall. The park district has announced it intends to resubmit the indoor pool proposal to the voters this fall. An exact date has not been announced yet; that will come next month. FROM THE FINANCIAL side of the picture, both districts have comparable tax rates, with Hoffman Estates, including the referendum increase, at .3343 per $100 equalized assessed valuation and Schaumburg park rate at .336 per $100 equalized assessed valuation. If the indoor pool were passed, the rate in Hoffman Estates would go up to .3659. Roughly, that means it would cost about $1 more a year to remain in Hoffman Estates with the indoor pool.

In the area of recreation programs, neither park district presently offers any programs within walking distance of the development. The development itself comes complete with a swimming pool, tennis courts and a spacious club house. Some of those facilities could be used by either park district for programs. Hoffman Estates Park Dir. Al Binder has indicated this is a definite possibility for the area. The programs themselves are similar, though Schaumburg holds an edge here in numbers. But, both offer a large number of programs for recreation, arts and crafts and the like. Comparative factors being nearly equal, the only logical decision would be for Sheffield Towne residents to remain in the Hoffman Estates Park District. To disannex and remain independent would mean paying out-of-district fees for programs to either district. If the area were to disannex and join the Schaumburg Park District, they would be paying a high tax rate. In addition to the regular Schaumburg rate they also would continue to pay the portion of the Hoffman Estates tax approved by the June 10 referendum. WHILE THE DETAILS of the recreational programs are a major factor, the cost of those programs probably represents what the majority of the homeowners feel is most important. As a sidelight, the disannexation process, which requires a petition and court action, would take from 60 to 90 days, according to attorneys, and it may already be too late for the residents there to disannex before the next referendum.

Hoffman Estates park officials, however, will probably try to resolve the situation before announcing a definite date for their next attempt. In a parochial sense, because Sheffield Towne is in Schaumburg, residents might find some comfort in belonging to the Schaumburg Park District, even though it is a separate taxing body. The residents stand to gain from staying with Hoffman Estates and backing the indoor pool. The increase in taxes will put them above the Schaumburg rate, but at the same time they will have the use of the pool, if it is approved, which the residents of Schaumburg at this time do not have. To leave the Hoffman Estates Park District they would certainly be paying more and getting less in the way of service.

Flood Damage May Delay Township Library Opening

Flood damage, estimated as high as $50,000, may delay the opening of the new Schaumburg Township Public Library wing until January, 1973. The lower level of the new facility, to have opened this week, was flooded with six feet of water late Friday. Michael Madden, librarian, said minutes before the library closed Friday evening the creek bordering the back of the library site crested pouring water into the new wing. The original section of the library stayed dry throughout the flood. Sump pumps in the older section kept water out, he added. Electrical transformers in the building and outside went out of service, said Madden, when water covered mechanical equipment in the new wing. Sump pumps in that section went out with the transformers. HOWEVER, THE older wing utilizing separate electrical and heating units was operable. The upper floor of the new wing had been carpeted early in the day and was filled with furniture, book stacks and volumes that were to be moved to the lower level Monday. All were spared. "Thankfully the flood waters found an empty area workers had cleared in preparation for laying the carpeting Monday," said Madden. Madden, the library staff on duty that night, building contractor and architects stayed in the building throughout the flood. Madden described the area as one big lake. Residents living on the creek property said this was the first time the creek, a tributary of Salt Creek had ever flooded. Madden said the building's structure is sound and the only damage is to mechanical fixtures such as the boilers, air conditioning and electrical equipment. "Damage could be $30,000 to $50,000, but until the equipment is dried, cleaned and tested the figure is just guess work," said Madden. IT IS ALSO possible the library may open sooner. First inspections of the area after the water receded showed scant silt and mud deposits on the floors. "We hope this means the equipment will not have to be replaced," added Madden. Madden said equipment replacement could cause the delay in opening, since it must be built to order and the job takes six weeks. The library is open and the staff is conducting business as usual in the older section. "The Duchess of Malfi," an Elizabethan play scheduled to show in the new wings theater in the round will be presented in early September as planned. Library Trustee Joe McAuliffe said lack of electrical power will not stop the presentation. "We will present the Duchess in the Elizabethan style, by candlelight if need be," said McAuliffe who is directing the play being presented under the sponsorship of the Friends of the Library.

Moratorium Called On Hospital

Schaumburg Village Atty. Jack Siegel cast the lone dissenting vote on a moratorium placing a freeze on all hospital plans in Schaumburg Township until a health care study is completed. The vote came last week at a meeting of the Northwest Cook County Health Care Needs Study committee. The group is currently completing a detailed study of health needs for the area. Siegel was representing Schaumburg Mayor Robert Atcher at the meeting. The planning freeze, part of a policy statement adopted by the group, was aimed at delaying planning efforts being made by Schaumburg and Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center to build a hospital in Schaumburg. Siegel, in voting against the statement, said he did not think action would be in the best interest of the village. Atcher yesterday gave Siegel full backing. THE REPORT is scheduled to be completed next month. "I am hard pressed to understand if the purpose of the committee is to keep Presbyterian-St. Luke's out or to keep a hospital from being built in Schaumburg," Atcher said yesterday. "But if they are concerned with the health care needs of the people of the community, then it is completely impossible for me to understand their activities," he added. Atcher gave full backing to Siegel's action on the issue. The mayor explained that the committee's study will be completed long before any architectural plans are even started. "We will still be able to take full advantage of this report and incorporate its suggestions in our plans," Atcher said. SOME MEMBERS of the committee, which includes representatives from Hoffman Estates, Roselle, Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Northwest Community Hospital as well as Schaumburg, privately suggested the adoption of the moratorium represented a censure of Schaumburg's activities. Some members of the committee were highly critical of

School Board 'Reassesses' Pact Stand

Members of the High School Dist. 211 board of education's negotiating team are "reassessing our entire position" in contract talks with the district's teachers because of support the teachers gave their bargaining unit last week. At a one-hour meeting last night between board team and officials of the Dist 211 Education Association, the teachers bargaining group, board spokesman Robert Seger congratulated the association on the support it received from the teachers last Tuesday. "As a result of your meeting," Seger said, "we are right now in the process of reassessing where we stand, what our priorities are and what sort of agreement we can reach with you." Following the brief meeting, the two sides agreed to hold their next meeting on Tuesday, Sept. 5 and set tentative meetings for later that same week. Seger explained that his team could not meet with the teachers later this week because it will not be able to get together to discuss its position until the weekend when the board president returns from the West Coast. "I don't know what our position will be after we reevaluate," Seger said. "I'm afraid I'm going to have to ask you for some patience. Our reaction to your meeting was that we've got to reevaluate everything we've done because we're on a collision course and we don't want a collision." THE BOARD and association have been negotiating for nearly six months on a 1972-73 teachers contract. The two sides have been deadlocked on the issue of whether or not to include guarantees on "working conditions" such as class size, evaluation procedures and teacher workloads in the contract. Last Tuesday 235 of the 380 association members in the district supported their negotiating team's demand that guarantees on those items be placed in the contract. The board has in the past refused to place guarantees in the contract and has instead offered to set up committees to study any problems in the area of working conditions. Seger also told the teachers last night the board is considering hiring Richard Zwieback, a professional negotiator, as a consultant in the contract talks. Zwieback, co-counsel for the Illinois Association of School Boards, has worked with Palatine Twp. Dist. 15, River Trails Dist. 25 and Mount Prospect Dist. 57 in their negotiations, as well as with other districts around the state.

STEAK DANCE time has come to Hoffman Estates for the 13th consecutive year. Hoffman Estates firefighter Jim Dugan will be one of many firemen selling tickets for the Sept. 2 event. Here Dugan offers tickets to Mrs. Linda Behrens.

Fire District Slates Dance Sept. 2

Proceeds from Hoffman Estates Fire District's 13th Annual Steak Dance, scheduled for Sept. 2, will be used to purchase a coronary care ambulance. "If we sell all tickets, limited to 500, we will realize our goal and have made enough to buy the $20,000 vehicle," said Ed Kalasa, deputy fire chief. Tickets, at $12 per couple if purchased in advance, are now available from any member of the fire department. Tickets purchased at the door will, however, cost $15, Kalasa said. The annual event will be held in Chino Park and will begin at 6 p.m. Sept. 2. Tickets may be obtained by calling 894-4420 or 894-9270.

MSD Will Eye New Amendments

by ANNE SLAVICEK

Northwest suburban communities and local sanitary districts will have to inspect all sewer systems within their jurisdictions if proposed amendments to a Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) sewer permit ordinance and manual of procedures are approved by the district.

The new amendments, which the MSD board of trustees will consider Sept. 14, would require agencies which receive MSD permits for sewer construction to complete the inspections within one year after the amendment becomes effective.

The required inspections would include checking all buildings to find any downspouts or roof drains which are connected, either directly or indirectly, to sanitary sewers. The municipality would then be responsible for seeing that any such illegal connections were eliminated.

The new amendment would also require municipalities and sanitary districts to inspect visually the sanitary sewer systems over which they have jurisdiction in an effort to find places where storm water flows into sanitary sewers.

Storm water often gets into sanitary sewer systems through leaking or open manholes, illegal stormwater connections or because of problems at creek and ditch crossings and other points of storm sewer connections and overflows.

The amendment would require inspections during both wet and dry weather periods. Municipalities and local sanitary districts would be required to make sure any such illegal connections found in the inspections were eliminated.

Quarterly reports of the inspections required in the new amendment would have to be submitted to the MSD by the municipalities and local sanitary districts.

The new amendment would also retain the MSD's power to seek out and eliminate illegal connections of storm water into sanitary sewers.

Other changes in the district's sewer permit ordinance and manual of procedures incorporated into the amendments include:

—Allowing the MSD to issue permits for sewer construction to "responsible individuals" as determined by the MSD board, so that individuals or corporations in unincorporated areas could provide their own sewer systems.

—Raising the fine for violation of the ordinance from an automatic $100 fine to a fine of from $100 to $1,000.

—Allowing the MSD board to waive the ordinance requirements in specific cases after a hearing.

—Requiring minimum maintenance of sewers serving single residential buildings of less than 25 dwelling units even though such sewers can be built without an MSD permit.

—Banning the connection of window wells or area-way drains to any sanitary sewer.

—Changing wording of a section encouraging stormwater detention by local governments and developers to include basins that are dry except in peak rainfall periods as well as lake basins.

—Adding a statement that comprehensive planning of flood control, "is far more beneficial than the proliferation of small, on-site detention areas."

—Eliminating stormwater detention requirements for any residential plat recorded prior to Jan. 1, 1972 unless the property is resubdivided after that date.

Not a man for all seasons... a man for TODAY... is the way close friends and former students characterize Brother Leo V. Ryan, C.S.V., newly appointed president of St. Viator High School.

A shade less than 20 years ago at St. Louis University, some of us knew Brother Ryan as a red-headed dynamo whose personality caused marketing classes to overflow each semester. Several years later, our younger friends, then at Marquette University, were touched by the influence of this same very special person.

We followed him, in spirit, to Nigeria as the first Roman Catholic clergyman to serve in the Peace Corps, and on to Rome on special assignment, then back to the States as director of education for the Viatorian Order.

All the while Brother Ryan kept in touch... because he is so very much in touch with life itself. He rejoiced in the birth of our children, kept tabs on our career progress, offered consolation in times of grief and always remains a staunch friend.

With little doubt, students at St. Viator will find themselves in for similarly profound relationships which they will cherish through the years.

Unless Brother Ryan gives permission, his penchant for hot peanut butter and bacon sandwiches can never be revealed. Nor can the saga of the two-month crash course in French just prior to his doctoral exams be told. But that was yesterday... not TODAY!

APPARENTLY, HOFFMAN Estates Plan Commission Chairman, Dick Regan has been polishing his crystal ball with one of the new high-powered window cleaning agents! Last week, he indicated plans to suggest Schaumburg officials refrain from duplicating names of existing streets in Hoffman Estates in order to avoid confusion.

In the "far distant future" Regan claims the two communities will be one. Now, being a man not given to rash statements in the past, perhaps he will share with us the neat feat in which "Super City" is to be created.

In the meantime, although the idea is sound, due to the geographical relationship of the two communities, the street name suggestion appears about as socially acceptable as Regan asking his neighbors to avoid using Richard as a given name for any newborn male children to eliminate similar confusion.

Odds are Schaumburg may answer with a four-letter word: NUTS!!

IN CASE anyone's interested... Tim Smith, newest appointee to Schaumburg Airport Feasibility Study committee, is advertising manager for Northwest Engineering (not to be confused with Northwest Airlines). "Tim is not one of those 'airline or aviation types' the committee has recently been described as having an over-abundance of... nor does his company have aviation ties," a committee spokesman explained.

BOB CROSSMAN, Schaumburg's most affable chief sanitarian, was back on the job last week following serious surgery earlier this month. We wish him well.

DEWEY DRESSER defines women's intuition as "fiction and fraud... but practically foolproof!"

High School Students Will Need Extra 5c For Hot Lunch

Students in High School Dist. 211 will need an extra nickel this year to buy hot lunches at school.

The board of education voted Thursday night to increase the student price for a "Class A" hot lunch from 45 to 50 cents. The increase will cover increased costs in preparing the lunches.

In addition, the board agreed to raise lunch prices for adults from 55 cents to 65 cents. The district receives six cents from the federal government for each complete "Class A" hot lunch it sells to students, but receives no money for lunches sold to adults.

Also Thursday, the board approved a proposal to change the grading system used by the district's music departments to the standard "A" through "F" system. In the past students in music classes have received grades of "I," "I plus" and "I minus."

REPRESENTATIVES FROM the Conant and Palatine High School music departments explained that the music grades will not be used in a student's grade point average or class standing.

However, the music teachers said they want to change to the standard letter grade system in order to make it more meaningful to students.

Board members had earlier criticized a provision in the proposal that provides that a student's grade will be lowered if he has an unexcused absence from a concert scheduled after school hours.

The teachers explained that it was necessary to enforce attendance at concerts for the good of the whole group. However, they said they do allow excused absences from concerts.

"We consider an unexcused absence to be really irresponsible," David Hans, music teacher from Conant, said. "Our idea is not to be tough on the kids, but we have to know when they are going to be gone."

BOARD MEMBERS directed that the district's policy on absences from music concerts be mailed to the parent of each student in music classes to assure that they understand the situation.

In other action the board: —Approved participation in hiring a vocational rehabilitation counselor in cooperation with High School Dist. 214 and the Northwest Suburban Special Education Service (NSSEO). The counselor will work with handicapped children in both school districts.

—Agreed to be administrative district for the Harper Area Career Program Cooperative. The program will allow students from Dist. 211, 214 and Barrington High School Dist. 224 to take classes in engineering, health occupations and computer fields at Harper College.

—Authorized purchase of a lot in the Timber Crest subdivision of Schaumburg for $8,500. Industrial arts students from Schaumburg High School will build a house on the property this year and the house will later be sold.

Registration Open For Boys' Hockey

Registration is now being taken for the Hoffman Hockey Club's 1972-73 season.

Boys 6 to 19 years old may register in one of the six age brackets by calling Club Pres. Wes Bartlett, 894-2781; vice-president John DiNardi, 882-3266 or 858-2700 or Sec. Rich Bernau, 894-3468.

The Hoffman Team will play a 21 game schedule at the Polar Dome in Dundee with additional games and practices to be held at the new Woodfield Hockey Center in Schaumburg.

The Hoffman club is a non-profit organization beginning its second year of activity but is not associated with any of the athletic groups here.

Boys must supply their own equipment, and the first practice is scheduled for Sept. 5.

Schools To Take 'Real' Veterans Day Holiday

The State of Illinois will celebrate Veterans Day on Nov. 11, but High School Dist. 211 will give its students Oct. 28 off.

The Dist. 211 board Thursday night agreed to keep its calendar unchanged and celebrate Veterans Day in October on the date officially set by the federal government.

The Illinois Legislature at its last session passed a law making the holiday in Illinois Nov. 11, the traditional anniversary of the armistice that ended World War I.

Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 and Palatine Township Dist. 15, the two elementary districts covering the area served by Dist. 211, also have decided to celebrate the October date.

Await Disaster Relief Declaration

Federal officials yesterday were awaiting a declaration of inundated lands around the Salt Creek as a disaster area, an action which would mean full recovery of damages for hundreds of homeowners and low-interest loans for others.

Passage just two weeks ago of new legislation concerning disaster relief would mean that homeowners who suffered less than $5,000 damages would recover the full amount. Those who suffered more than that would be eligible for one per cent loans up to $50,000 for damages to real estate and $10,000 to personal property. Each loan would include a $5,000 "forgiveness."

U.S. Rep. Roman Pucinski, D-11th, explained the terms of the new legislation, and estimated after inspecting the afflicted area that a substantial number of the homeowners affected had losses of less than $5,000. If they substantiated their claims, their loans would simply be marked "PAID."

Estimates of damages in Cook County ranged up to $2.5 million to some 1,850 homes and 100 businesses. In DuPage County, an estimated 3,000 homes suffered up to $5 million damages.

In order to qualify property owners for the federal aid, either the Small Business Administration or President Nixon must declare the area as a "disaster."

BOTH PUCINSKI and Republican Sen. Charles H. Percy have asked the White House for the disaster declaration. After touring the area by rowboat Sunday, Percy declared that in some cases, damage was as bad as those in the recent Pennsylvania floods.

Pucinski said there was "no question

in my mind" that the declaration would be made.

He urged local officials to wire the White House asking for federal aid. He also advised homeowners and businessmen to obtain pictures, "preferably color pictures" of the damages in order to be able later to substantiate their claims.

Mayor Robert Teichert of Mount Prospect also said yesterday that he will ask the Department of Local Government Affairs to inspect the damage and to determine whether any state aid is available to victims of the flooding.

A spokesman for the Small Business Administration in Chicago said that field offices would be established as soon as possible if disaster aid is approved, and information on applications for funds would be distributed.

'Standard Clauses' In Insurance

Storm Cleanup And Repairs Continue

Cleaning up and repairs begun over the weekend are continuing this week from the severe storm Friday night that brought extensive flooding in some Schaumburg-Hoffman Estates homes. Unfortunately for flood victims, most insurance policies contain standard clauses stating that there is no coverage for flood damage.

More than eight feet of water poured into the basement of Donald Morris, 203 Hickory Ln., Schaumburg. The water, which broke basement windows, reached up to the front door. Pumping by the public works department Friday night kept the water from entering the first floor of the house.

The Morris' report extensive property damage. The furnace, air conditioner, hot water heater, basement furniture and carpeting were inundated with water.

THE WASHING machine was floating up near the ceiling. A $700 pool table was overturned and totally ruined. Wall paneling buckled.

Saturday, workmen were out to repair the hot water heater. The washer, dryer, furnace, and air conditioner also need extensive repairs. The paneling was so damaged by the water and debris that it had to be ripped off the walls.

"This is the worst flooding we've ever had. But it really shouldn't have happened. We've been fighting with the village to do something about flooding we've experienced for over five years," Mrs. Virginia Medina, Mrs. Morris' mother said.

An open field lies behind the Morris house. According to Mrs. Medina, five or six years ago, the builder came in with his heavy tractors and broke up the drain tile in the field.

"WE'VE TRIED to get the village to put pressure on the builder to fix the drain tile. As it is now, the water has no place to go but into our basement. The village has promised to do something, but it hasn't," Mrs. Medina said.

Village officials could not be reached for comment.

Water flooded into the entire house of Robert E. Moran, 215 Northview Ln., Hoffman Estates. The Morans were one of the three Hoffman Estates families who spent Friday night at the Holiday Inn in Elk Grove.

The village paid for their stay at the hotel because flood waters reached the living areas of the homes.

"The whole house had four to six inches of water in it. The water was rushing up through the ducts in all the rooms, including the bedrooms. This is the second time we've been flooded this month," Mrs. Moran said.

Upon getting out her insurance policy, Mrs. Moran discovered the standard flooding clause.

Residents Unite To Save Wildlife

Dozens of Schaumburg residents, firemen and public works employees worked several hours Saturday afternoon in an effort to save many of the animals at the Town Square Shopping Center game preserve.

The game preserve which surrounds a small retention lake, suffered heavy flooding as a result of the severe Friday night rains.

The water had reached a level putting normally dry sections of the preserve under several feet of water.

Village public works field supervisor, J. C. Smith said he went out to the site with Schaumburg Mayor Robert O. Atcher after receiving several calls on the situation. He said the water was so high equipment could not be used to pump water away.

SMITH THEN took a backhoe and dug a trench to relieve the water from the lake so that area would drain quicker.

"All of my crews had been out as much as I had on Friday and Saturday, so I just did the work myself," he explained.

Schaumburg firemen were then able to come in and pump more water out of the pond.

It was good to see other people out at the area helping to rescue some of the animals, Smith added.

Atcher ordered the trenching operation after other methods of saving the animals were considered impractical.

"Some had suggested we use boats to capture all the animals. We decided that all the animals might become so frightened they may drown," Atcher said.

Ray Hart, president Town Square Merchants Association, said about 20 chickens were drowned by the high water.

Something will have to be done to alleviate the possibility of further flooding problems, he added.

PART OF THE problem was caused by the installation of a choke valve on the outlet of the lake. The valve was installed in accordance to Metropolitan Sanitary District specifications. It is designed to restrict the flow of water from the lake.

Some persons have predicted the valve might endanger the animals because rising water would eliminate any dry ground for the animals.

Harty said one possibility of solving the problem might be to construct platforms inside the barn in the preserve so that the animals could get onto higher ground if heavy rains occur again.

Village Takes Steps To Control Cats

by NANCY COWGER

Further steps were taken in official Schaumburg circles last week to control cats in response to a growing number of citizen complaints.

Also in answer to a resident's request, one measure to preserve wildlife is being investigated.

Health and safety committee members voted to support a recommendation to the village board of mandatory rabies immunizations for cats owned by Schaumburg residents. The plan is to be presented to the village board in September by Trustee Peter Justen, committee chairman.

Required frequency of rabies immunization will follow state statutes. They permit vaccination of dogs, cats and other animals in intervals of one, two or three years, depending on dosage and type of serum used.

THE COMMITTEE deferred action on other cat control measures until a board of health study is completed. Among restrictions which could be applied are licensing and leash laws.

Already approved by the village board is purchase of equipment to protect and aid men in apprehending cats and other animals. The equipment will be used to pick up animals to be impounded for rabies observation. The board voted Tuesday to buy nine pairs of buckskin gloves, two special poles and three nets.

Police Chief Martin Conroy requested the equipment in a report he issued after studying cat control ordinances in other villages.

He explained use of tranquilizer guns by other villages, but suggested a delay in purchasing one pending a legal opinion from the village attorney. Conroy suggested the village might risk lawsuits if such a gun was used. The guns should be aimed to strike the hindquarters of the animal, rather than the chest area where they can penetrate lungs, Conroy said. They are fired at a 10-20 yard range.

WHILE HE MADE no recommendation on which arm of village government should enforce cat control ordinances, his report indicates a variety of procedures in area communities. The health and safety committee will invite the chief and Village Clerk Sandy Carsello to discuss the matter at its Sept. 27 meeting.

In Elk Grove Village and Arlington Heights, police department patrolmen handle all animal calls, with a special man assigned to warden duties in Arlington Heights. Evanston uses a civilian warden, but he is under direct supervision of the police department. Skokie's warden is a villager supervised by the health department. The Skokie warden earns $550 per month, Arlington Heights' patrolman receives $13,200 annually and Evanston's earns $7,800 to start. No single person is responsible for animal warden duties in Elk Grove Village.

In the meantime, Schaumburg's health office is revising the existing dog control ordinance to specifically include cats. It will be presented to the village board for approval.

MRS. BETTY ENBYSK, a health board member, asked the committee to consider feline control laws carefully, noting "cats are the only rodent predator" in the village. She suggested a survey be made of communities having cat control ordinances to determine if they result in increased rodent problems.

Propose Testimonial For Carroll

by BOB LAHEY

A rather unique proposal for a bipartisan testimonial dinner for his former campaign opponent has been made by Thomas Flynn of Niles, Democratic candidate for the state Senate in the new 4th Legislative District.

Flynn has asked that the regular Republican and Democratic party organizations of Maine Township join together in paying tribute to Republican Sen. John W. (Bill) Carroll of Park Ridge, who until announcement of his retirement recently was seeking reelection against Flynn. Carroll has served in the Senate since 1966.

"I did not and do not agree with Sen. Carroll philosophically," Flynn said. "But I recognize the sacrifice he made in going to Springfield for those 16 years."

Flynn proposed the dinner be held sometime in December and declared that he will pursue the plan whether or not he is elected. John Nimrod, Republican committeeman for Niles Township, replaced Carroll as Flynn's opponent.

NIMROD WILL be a delegate to the International Association of Industrial Accident Boards, to be held in Montreal, Canada, in early September.

Nimrod will represent Illinois as assistant to the chairman of the Illinois Industrial Commission and project director for a state plan to comply with the Federal

Sen. John Carroll

John Nimrod

Occupational Safety and Health Act.

The project in which he is engaged would provide the state with a plan to retain jurisdiction over occupational safety and health, rather than turning it over to the federal government. It would establish standards and rules for all industries and businesses throughout Illinois.

ED FRANK of Hoffman Estates, Democratic candidate for the U.S. Congress in the new 12th Congressional District, will appear at a coffee at the home of Ed and Dixie Mathisen, 184 Timberlane Dr., Palatine, Thursday evening. The affair is scheduled from 8 to 10 p.m.

FRANK ANNOUNCED appointment of his township campaign coordinators at the recent opening of a Democratic campaign headquarters at 12 W. Campbell St. in Arlington Heights.

They are: Judson Ball, Barrington Township; Kent Kirkwood of Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Township; Charles Zeller of Arlington Heights, Wheeling Township; Mrs. Sally Kehe and Ed Mathisen of Palatine, Palatine Township; Mr. and Mrs. Dominic DiNuzzo of Hanover Park, and Mr. and Mrs. Jack McGinn of Hoffman Estates, Schaumburg Township.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lewandowski of Streamwood, Hanover Township; Dom Ronzani of Highwood, Deerfield Township; and Mrs. Betty Spence of Buffalo Grove, Vernon Township.

The Doctor Says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — I am a 25-year-old mother of two. During each pregnancy I gained a lot of weight and lost very little between pregnancies. In the last 18 months I have lost more than 25 pounds by exercising and dieting. The skin of my abdomen does not seem to be tightening properly. As the amount of fat behind it lessens, the skin is becoming loose and flabby. I am almost afraid to lose another 20 pounds. I don't want to be left with a flap of extra skin hanging from my abdomen. What can I do to tighten the skin and possibly fade the stretch marks somewhat?

Dear Reader — Give it time and it may shrink. After all your letter indicates that you've stretched it with 45 pounds of extra fat plus the normal stretch that's caused by two successive pregnancies.

You can improve your health a great deal by getting rid of your excess fat and I hope you'll continue your program until you are at your normal weight. If the skin doesn't tighten up in the course of several months, and if it really bugs you a lot, I suppose you could see a surgeon about having the excess skin removed. It would leave a small incision scar which wouldn't need to be particularly visible.

You've lost the weight at the right time of your life. There is a much greater likelihood of the skin returning to normal if people get rid of the excess weight early in life and keep it off rather than waiting until they're much older and their skin is less elastic to take serious measures about weight reduction.

Dear Dr. Lamb — Please tell me how alcohol will affect the liver?

Dear Reader — In large amounts, alcohol is a toxin or poison. It has been demonstrated by microscopic studies that the cells of the heart can be damaged by drinking alcohol. Other cells in the body can also be damaged. Alcohol not only can damage liver cells but it can affect their normal function. Some people who drink lots of alcohol do not eat an adequate diet and particularly have a deficiency of vitamin B-1 or thiamine. This further contributes to damage of the actual liver cells.

For years there was a hot debate in medical circles whether the alcohol alone could cause damage to the liver or whether it had to be associated with a thiamine deficiency. It really doesn't make any difference which factor is the most important. The ultimate result of drinking too much for many people is damaged liver cells which are replaced by scar tissue causing a condition called cirrhosis of the liver. In severe degrees eventually liver failure can ensue.

The damaged liver loses its ability to destroy excess amounts of estrogen, the female hormone. Estrogen is normally produced in men as well as women. When excess amounts accumulate because of liver disease men experience a degree of feminization which can affect their sexual capacity. There basically isn't anything good that alcohol has ever been demonstrated to do for the liver, the brain or the heart. The only medical use alcohol has is as a sedative or tranquilizer.

Win At Bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

When both sides lead the same suit, the odds that one side is making a mistake are overwhelming.

South found himself in a four-spade contract after typical rubber bridge bidding. His two-spade bid was a sign-off but North looked at his 18 points and bid game anyway.

West opened the jack of diamonds. Dummy's queen was topped by East's ace and a diamond was led back. Dummy's king won and South proceeded to play the king and jack of trumps.

West allowed them to hold, whereupon South led a heart to his king; a second heart to dummy's jack and then dummy's ace. East showed out but this didn't worry South.

He ruffed dummy's last diamond; ruffed his last heart; cashed dummy's ace of clubs for his ninth trick, and was still sure of a trump trick for his contract.

East promptly pointed out that West could have beaten the contract if he had taken the second trump and led a third round, but that South would have had a cinch if he had just led one round of trumps.

East's analysis was correct but we can't really fault either South or West. South didn't know that trumps were go-

Sewage From 9 Northwest Suburbs May Be Treated

Vow Water Reclamation Plant 'Won't Stink'

by ANNE SLAVICEK
Second of Two Parts

Even though sewage from nine Northwest suburban communities will be treated at the proposed O'Hare Water Reclamation Plant, the plant isn't going to have a bad odor, according to Ben Sosewitz, Metropolitan Sanitary District Superintendent.

Sosewitz told the Herald he can "guarantee" the plant will not give off offensive odors to annoy residents living near the 105 acre plant site at Oakton Street and Elmhurst Road in Des Plaines.

For one thing, Sosewitz said neither the state nor the federal government would approve the plant or help finance it if it were to pollute the air in the surrounding neighborhood with offensive odors.

Sosewitz says it is wrong for residents to point to the admittedly-smelly sewage treatment plant in Hanover Park and say that the same thing will happen in Des Plaines.

The Hanover Park plant has been chronically overloaded and the district has been unable to expand the plant fast enough to keep pace with growth in the area, he said.

THE BLAME FOR THE overloading lies with developers and communities in the area served by the Hanover Park plant who have allowed illegal sewer connections, Sosewitz said.

As a result of the illegal hookups the district has had to store the excess sewage in ponds "in order to give as much water as possible some treatment before releasing it into streams in the area," Sosewitz said. And it is the ponds which emit the odors.

In the case of the proposed O'Hare plant the district has a series of expansion steps already scheduled for the plant which will eventually lead to the plant treating 98 million gallons of water per day.

No additional land will be needed at the Oakton Street and Elmhurst Road site in order to expand the plant to that maximum, Sosewitz said.

WATER GOING THROUGH the plant will receive a three stage treatment process which will remove 99% per cent of the bacteria and suspended solids from the sewage. The remaining liquid then goes through processes of nitrification, ammonia removal, phosphate removal (if necessary), and chlorination, Sosewitz explains.

The resulting effluent is pure enough that, with additional chlorination, it could be used for drinking water, Sosewitz said. It is as pure, if not purer, than average drinking water reserves, he said.

The O'Hare plant will also not treat sludge which is a process capable of producing odors, Sosewitz said.

SLUDGE FROM THE O'Hare plant will be transported to the Salt Creek Water Reclamation Plant in unincorporated Schaumburg for treatment, Sosewitz said, adding the MSD does not anticipate any odor at the Salt Creek plant either.

"But sludge affects the quality of treatment and can cut operating efficiency and overload a plant," Sosewitz said.

Because residents fear odors from the plant and because the City of Des Plaines is losing tax revenue on the land, the city is currently suing the MSD to halt plans for the plant. An earlier court decision on the first suit filed by Des Plaines gave the Sanitary District immunity from local zoning laws which would not have allowed the plant to be built on the site.

The MSD will seek federal and state funding to pay up to 80 per cent of the cost of the plant once engineering designs are completed, Sosewitz said. Although the funding is not approved, both state and federal long range plans already include the building of the O'Hare plant, Sosewitz said.

COMMUNITIES WHICH would be entirely or partially served by the plant include Wheeling, Buffalo Grove, Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, Prospect Heights, Des Plaines, Glenview, Rolling Meadows and Elk Grove Village.

A sidelight to the dispute between Des Plaines and the MSD is the city's refusal to vacate a three-block section of Wille Road which cuts through the bottom third of the proposed sewage treatment plant site.

Sosewitz said the city's opposition is a "serious mistake" which will affect safety, and will hike operating costs of the plant which will in turn mean higher taxes for local taxpayers.

But Sosewitz said the MSD does not know how much more it will cost to build the plant if the public street remains.

Although Sanitary District officials have indicated in the past the plant can be built with the street in place, they have also said the MSD might move to legally condemn the road if the cost of leaving it in place proves too high.

ANOTHER COURT BATTLE over the power of the city as opposed to the power of the sanitary district would surely result from such a condemnation suit however.

Sosewitz told the MSD board of trustees at a meeting last week that the great delay in the plant construction could mean problems in using current facilities to treat sanitary sewage from the Northwest suburban communities in the area to be served by the plant.

Asked if the situation could lead to a moratorium on sanitary district permits like the one which has delayed building for the last year in Streamwood, Sosewitz said "yes, it's reasonable to consider such a possibility. There could be an end to permits and the growth of the area probably could be affected."

Teacher Training Upswing

by BETSY BROOKER

More and more teachers are going back to school to add to their education, in many cases right in their hometown.

The upswing in continuing education is going hand in hand with a commitment from the universities to bring courses to neighborhood locations.

Acting as a liaison between the teachers and universities, the Northwest Education Cooperative (NEC) is redoubling its teacher training efforts.

Teacher training is only one of a variety of education programs operated by the 10 school district cooperative. Local members include districts 15, 21, 23, 25, 26, 57, 211 and 214.

THE NEC PROGRAM offers a variety of courses ranging from a state-funded bilingual program designed to train teachers how to work with bilingual students to a master's degree program offered as an extension in local locations.

In some cases NEC is cooperating with the state or a university to offer a program. In others, the cooperative is going strictly on its own and using local funds.

Teachers are requesting and attending the training programs for both professional and personal reasons. Generally the very nature of their profession demands they keep up with the latest innovations in education.

According to Gloria Kinney, NEC director, "It is a definite trend to see education as a continuing thing, and not completed at the end of four college years. Most school districts encourage their teachers to go back to college for additional training."

The ambitious teacher looking for advancement usually finds he has to go back to school to get a master's degree and administrator's certificate.

TEACHERS WHO may not be interested in joining the administrative ranks are going back to school to improve their skills in a specific area, such as learning disabilities, or just to fill an interest.

Universities are finding it an opportune time to meet the continuing education demand because, in many cases, their undergraduate enrollment is decreasing. In addition the Illinois Board of Higher Education is encouraging the universities to take time off from research to provide field service for working teachers.

NEC is right in the middle of the continuing education move and approaching it from several angles.

The cooperative is acting as a direct agent of the state in offering two teacher training programs, one for bilingual students and one for gifted students. Because the state pays for the programs, they are available to any teacher in the state, but most accessible to teachers in the NEC area.

In its second year, the gifted program helps teachers develop programs for a specific type of student or curriculum. For example, the program might be designed to teach accelerated music or the inquiry process of evaluating and interpreting facts.

THE TRAINING personnel, headquartered at the Dist. 25 Administration Center, go to a district upon request. The program is flexible in that the district decides what type of program they want and how much help they need from the NEC staff. The staff could do everything from determining the need of a program through tests, designing it, and telling teachers how to use it.

The bilingual program, beginning this fall, is the first of its kind in the state.

The staff will probably use the same approach as the gifted program in working with school districts. If successful, the program will be set up in other state locations.

On a strictly local level, NEC offers summer workshops for teachers in areas such as science, math and learning disabilities. A university provides the professor and college credit for the tuition paid courses.

In addition, weekend workshops are held for the teachers and evening seminars for administrators and school board members during the school year. Again these are held upon request and at local expense.

FOR THE TEACHER who wants to earn college credit during the school year, NEC is sponsoring several courses ranging from achievement motivation to reading. In the past the cooperative has offered only a few courses which were requested by the teachers. Now, after surveying the teachers' interests, NEC will boost the selection.

Another new addition this fall will be a master's degree program credited with Northern Illinois University. The courses are offered in a sequence over a two year period in local areas. Teachers must take the second half of the degree credits on the university campus during the school year or summer.

A new NEC staff development committee, composed of member district administrators and NEC personnel, are coordinating the college credit programs. They surveyed the teachers and plan to compile a directory of education courses offered locally, either as extensions or on nearby college campuses.

Teachers Favor Back To School Move

Almost all the 1,445 teachers surveyed in eight local districts say they are interested in going back to school for more college credits.

The survey was conducted by a committee of school administrators from districts belonging to the Northwest Education Cooperative. Based on the teachers' responses, NEC will offer a variety of university extension courses this fall.

A majority of the teachers were between 21 and 30 years of age, do not have a master's degree and are not enrolled in a degree program. Their future plans are to continue with their present assignment but also earn additional college credits.

THE TEACHERS were most interested in specialized graduate courses including: achievement motivation, behavior modification, individualized instruction, teaching gifted children, guidance, learning disabilities, open schools and reading remediation. All of these courses will be sponsored by NEC this fall.

Those wanting to earn an advanced degree cited academics, special education and elementary education as their interests.

Rogers Sends Arlington Home

by PAUL LOGAN
 RICHMOND, IND. — When the American Legion Regional Tournament began here Wednesday, Kokomo's Tom Underwood was the most talked-about pitcher. When the tourney ended late Sunday night, Chuck Rogers received all the attention in the little community which borders his native state. Using a lively fast ball and a crackling curve, he struck out 21 Arlington Heights batters to lead Findlay, Ohio to the championship, 3-0, at Municipal Stadium.

This was a very fine Arlington team, but it finally met its match during the double-elimination tourney. After two successive wins, Heights had lost to the Ohio state champ on Friday, 16-8. Although the locals played much better Sunday, Rogers just proved to be too tough to handle.

Coach Lloyd Meyer's team knocked off some pretty high caliber opponents for the past couple of weeks in tourney action, but it ran into the best in Findlay. When you have to lose, there's some slight consolation in doing so to the top team.

Rogers' talent was showcased in the first game of the Great Lakes Regional as he beat Wisconsin 3-2 while fanning 16.

"I've never had that many," said Rogers of his massive strikeouts total against Arlington. "I usually average about 15 or 16 strikeouts and two or three walks."

However, a super athlete can usually be expected to come up with the outstanding performance when it's needed. And so it was for this big (6-5, 220) right-hander, to Arlington's dismay, as he fashioned a three-hitter.

After retiring the first seven batters in order, Jim Hopkins — the Arlington pitcher — got a piece of a slow curve and beat it out for an infield hit. And one out later, Bert Newman hunted his way on and Pat Broderick walked. Then Rogers forced Mark Leonhard to pop up to third which ended one of only two big threats mounted by the locals.

The next five innings were filled mostly with strikeouts as this soon-to-be University of Michigan athlete held Heights at bay. However, in the fourth a hitless incident occurred which set the tempo for the rest of the game.

Hopkins struck out swinging with runners on first and second to end the inning. In his disgust because of his failure, Hopkins tossed his bat. The umpire — following the rules very strictly — threw him out of the game. Needless to say, trailing 2-0 and having one of your star pitchers ejected made quite a few people upset.

Leonhard, who started in center field, did a fine job in relief, only allowing three hits and one run over the final five frames. During that time there were several hotly-contested situations which left tempers simmering into the ninth inning.

After striking out the first two batters in the final inning, Rogers' offering was crushed for a triple by Tony Fricano. "I was just putting it in there and he ripped one," said Rogers of Fricano's blast over the center fielder's head, one of only two balls hit out of the infield all night.

The next Rogers' pitch was a strike to Jim Prandini, who had replaced Hopkins in the batting order after the fateful fourth. Prandini was also ejected in a dispute at the plate. And this second expulsion brought more fury from the Arlington side than earlier.

Ed Carpenter took Prandini's place at the plate and quickly became the 21st strikeout victim. Everyone who batted for Arlington went down at least once on a "K." The frustrations of those incidents and the specter of being eliminated led to many arguments which somewhat tarnished the championship contest.

Findlay actually sewed it up in the first inning with the help of a leadoff dropped fly ball in the infield. A stolen base later, Karl Wirtz singled in the eventual winning run.

Dale Swiger then followed with the first of two well-hit triples to right-center. Along with his run-batted-in in the first, Swiger had a seventh-inning shot to the base of the wall which scored the final run.

The winners might have scored more if it weren't for some fine fielding plays by Arlington. Three plays were exceptional:

"In the third with two out and the bases filled, shortstop Jim Locascio — coming through as usual — managed to smother a hard grounder and force the runner at second.

"In the fourth with one out, a runner tried to steal second on catcher Pat Broderick. Outstanding throughout the tourney behind the plate, Broderick pounced on the ball in the dirt and cut the runner down.

"In the fifth, third baseman Dave Zare — moving quickly to his left — handled a slow grounder between short and the mound and threw out the batter while on the run.

But Rogers and his team — now holders of a splendid 41-4 record (25 out of the last 26) — didn't need those other potential runs. Rogers went on to strike out the side in four different innings and registered six called strikeouts. The only inning he didn't have more than one "K" was the second.

Findlay now advances to the nationals later this week in Memphis, Tenn. Arlington finished with a 33-14 record and the second-place Regional trophy — accomplishments to be proud of.

IT'S THAT TIME of the year again to make an annual review of the highlights — and lowlights — of the past Little League season.

There are always an overflow of astounding and humorous facts reported from literally hundreds of leagues, thousands of teams and tens of thousands of players in the northwest suburban communities served by this newspaper.

Kids are and always have been unpredictable and that goes doubly when they're playing (or trying to play) baseball and when there are so many reports to pick from.

We're always thankful for the time and trouble of parents and scorekeepers in getting results to us to recognize achievements, so the following is not meant as criticism. It's just that the more unusual reports serve as day-brighteners for this sports staff (while typing seeming mountainous stacks of accounts on summer days) and we like to share these light moments.

So without further adieu (as Ed Sullivan used to say), here is the third annual edition of "Best Of The Little League Reports."

BIGGEST SCORES
 (Before starting on this category, let me assure you that every one of the following scores is for real.)

A. Most One-Sided Scores:
 The granddaddy of all the slaughters this year and a new all-time (so far as we know) single-game scoring record for any organized (?) game occurred when the Orioles nipped the Robins 50-4 in a Hoffman Estates Girls Softball League.

Close behind and also up there on the all-time list of gems were these: Bisons 40, Darts 3 in the North Green Junior League of Arlington Heights; Vixens 42, Wildcats 10 in the Elk Grove Junior League; Giants 38, Lions 6 in the Bronco B Mount Prospect League; Sox 35, Braves 4 in the same loop; and Fox Insurance 32, Arlington Realty 3 in the Red Division of Palatine North.

Some of the other more noticeable scores were a pair of 28-2's, 26-1, 28-4, 27-4 and 25-5 (that last one almost seems like a squeaker by comparison).

B. Best Slugfests:
 The three games farthest from being pitchers' duels all came from the same league this year — the Ponytail League of the Hoffman Estates Athletic Association. The Ravens edged the Falcons 40-36 (each team was actually scoreless for one inning), the Cardinals outlasted the Orioles 30-29 and the Cardinals bombed the Ravens 40-19. (The Cards' lethal bats thus produced 70 runs on 108 hits in two games).

In the Waycinden Mustang League of the Des Plaines Boys Baseball Association, Barnaby's came from behind with 23 runs in the sixth inning and 11 in the seventh for a 42-20 triumph over Mr. Steak.

Other genuine scores were 21-19, 42-22, 18-16, 18-14 and 18-13. (The last three were almost commonplace in some leagues).

MOST RUNS ON FEWEST HITS
 In the 42-22 defensive battle mentioned above, there were just 19 hits for the total of 64 runs.

In an Arlington Heights American Varsity game, the Bobcats got 11 hits to the Penguins' three. The score, though, was 17-4 — in favor of the Penguins.

Two runs combined for 23 runs on one (1) hit. The Cubs were no-hit but trimmed the Cards (who got one hit), 12-11 in a Bronco B game in Mount Prospect.

In a South Blue Intermediate game in Arlington, the totals were: Sox, nine runs on three hits; Bearcats, six runs on two hits.

And in another Bronco B contest, the Sox did not get a hit but only lost 18-10.

MOST HILARIOUS (INTENDED OR NOT) REPORT SHEETS
 For an 18-13 game that included 57 hits, the scorer wrote: "There were outstanding catches by three boys and one of them pitched three innings and struck out a few. The Giants played good. Our team has spirit and team togetherness, also trying for first place."

A 16-13 slugfest did not include the names of any boys getting hits, but did outline how two double plays were executed.

The 42-22 game had winning pitcher and losing pitcher as the only details mentioned.

The same lucky boy was credited as winning pitcher and winning catcher in the same game. (He must be able to run very fast or else throw some awfully slow pitches).

Standings for one league added up to 10 wins and seven losses (that's a tough league) and for another the total was seven wins and nine losses.

One boy threw a two-hit shutout. "Ken C." is his name as reported to us.

In one game the winning team was credited for 21 hits with just five runs and the other 20 hits for four runs. (It couldn't possibly be that some of those "hits" were errors or walks, could it?)

One boy "was awarded the game ball for a terrific slide into home plate" in a 15-11 game.

Another player was reported to have stolen home five times in one game.

One scorekeeper listed as the only highlights a list of rosters and uniform numbers (presumably in case that team ever plays on television).

A game was cut short by darkness after three and one-half innings with a 23-15 score. Only one hitter was reported.

A certain name was called "outstanding player of the game." He must have been the scorekeeper's son because he did not pitch or get any hits.

Two boys on one team were reported to have hit grand-slam home runs in one game in which their team had only one inning with as many as four runs.

Three different reports were sent in on the game. One had only names of players on one team, the other had only players on the other team, and the third had no names at all.

MOST AWESOME INDIVIDUAL PERFORMANCES
 Jim Rance drove in 12 runs in one game as his team, the Blues, beat the Orange 28-2 in the Palatine Future Stars League.

Mike Zielinski of the Comets of the Rolling Meadows Instructional League struck out every batter he faced in one game — 18 in six innings.

Hank Guaglianone drove in 12 runs with two homers and two triples in one game for the Pirates of the Rolling Meadows National Minor League.

In the best brother act of the season, the Brehms — Tim, Greg and Mark — all homered in the same game for A-1 Key Punch of the White Division of the Palatine North program.

Phil Lombardo pitched a perfect four-inning game and struck out 11 of 12 batters for the Indians of the American B League in Mount Prospect.

Dean Carpenter struck out 15 men in a row during a one-hit shutout for the Carpenters (who else?) in the West Major League in Des Plaines.

Doug Nelson had three home runs and 10 runs batted in for the Chicks of the North Green Juniors in Arlington Heights.

This is only a small sampling. I could go on and on, but I positively refuse to look at one more Little League report — until next May.

Palatine Dart Thrower Wins In Opening Round

Three of the leading dart throwers in the Chicago area will participate in mid-west regional finals leading to the first annual International Competition for the Pimm's Cup Trophy.

The three, who participated in the opening elimination matches for the tournament Tuesday night at O'Rourke's Public House, 319 West North Avenue, are:

Paul E. Clauss, 740 North Mozart Ave., Palatine, first place.

George Sutton, 428 West Belden Ave., Chicago, second.

Jan Olaf Nilsson, 1318 West Thorndale Ave., Chicago, third.

The regional playoffs will be held in late September.

Jack Guilfoyle, executive director of the National Dart League, which supervised the tournament, said that the mid-west winner will join winners from the East coast and the West coast to form a three-member team to play a British dart team in London on October 15 for the international championship.

Other elimination matches will be held in the midwest from now until the regional playoffs.

The American competition is sponsored by Pimm's Cup, a classic and popular British drink.

Entrants must be 21 years or older. Applications for the contest are available from the National Dart League, 711 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10022, and at many restaurants, pubs and liquor stores.

THE BEST IN Sports

Softball's King And Court Visit

"You don't have to be a softball fan to like the King and His Court, according to Eddie Feigner, founder, mentor and star performer of the diamond's awesome foursome.

"Some of our best fans are women, who think a strike is something you get when you bowl.

"Our bag is entertainment," says Feigner "and as long as we can make the fans laugh and cheer, we're happy."

The fun will begin at 7 o'clock on Sept. 12, 13 and 14th when the jolly jesters take on teams from Evanston at Thillens Stadium, Devon and Kedzie Avenues, in Chicago.

Pre-sale tickets of $2 are now on sale at the ball park after 6 p.m.

More than half a million fans a year turn out to watch the court entertain, but so far as opposing teams are concerned it is a game to be won. It would be quite a triumph to beat the court, especially when they have chalked up over 4900 victories while suffering less than 10 per cent of their games in defeat.

That record has been compiled since 1946, when Feigner — who is internationally famous as the World's Greatest Pitcher — founded his peerless organization. The four man team has brought their brand of comedy in softball to 49 states and have thrilled and delighted ball fans and non-fans on four continents.

HUSTLE DOES IT. Arlington catcher Pat Broderick reaches first safely on a high throw by the Kokomo shortstop last week in the opening round of the American Legion Region.

Bruins Win Metro Tourney, Qualify For Nationals

by TOM CARKEEK

The Bruins of the Rolling Meadows ASA 16-inch softball league rolled to four consecutive victories in the Chicago Metro Tournament over the weekend and won the right to represent Chicago in the national finals this Friday through Monday near St. Louis, Mo.

The Bruins, participating in the Metro tourney for the fourth consecutive year but emerging with the championship crown for the first time, routed Chiago P.D. 17-3 for the title. The Bruins jumped out to a big lead with 10 runs in the first three innings. "Things got out of hand right away," declared a jubilant Bob Campbell, the squad's player-coach and publicity director.

To gain a berth in the finals, the Bruins, who have fashioned a 45-7 record thus far this season and are 191-16 over the last three years, defeated Quaker Oats 8-1 in the opening round, turned back Continental Bank 11-0 with five runs in the seventh inning of their second test, and picked apart Coca-Cola 25-1 in the semi-finals.

The second-round game with Continental Bank held special significance for the Bruins, according to Campbell. "They had beaten us 6-5 the year before," he said. "They tied for third in the nation last year and were really loaded again so we really wanted that one."

The Bruins appeared to be on their way out of the Metro Tournament when Continental Bank hit them with an early 7-0 lead. But not only did the locals rise to the occasion, they overcame it.

"That was the turning point — when they had us 7-0 and we came back and won it anyhow," said Campbell. The Bruins struck for four runs in the fourth and five in the fifth to knot the count at 9-9 before rallying for five in the last inning, then setting the opponent down 1-2-3 in the bottom of the frame.

Advancing to the semi-finals against the Coca-Cola squad, the Bruins roared out to a 9-1 first inning lead and "then we added to it every inning," according to Campbell.

How did the Bruins win the Chicago tournament? Hitting, mainly.

"We hit a shade over .600 for the four-game tournament," Campbell revealed. "I've never seen us hit like that before. It was just incredible."

Offensive heroes were in abundance for the victors. Campbell cited first baseman Ken Ieral's team-leading 12 hits in tourney play and 11 apiece by short center fielder Ed Pitts and shortstop Paul Duval as the most instrumental in the Bruins' championship trek. In addition, Rich Urbanski, Al Ostrowski, Pitts and Campbell himself all belted a couple of homers and Bob Nay and Don Welker each slugged one round tripper.

But hitting was not the only stone in the Bruins' championship crown. Their defense shone, as evidenced by the amazingly low total of just three errors in the four contests, a superlative defensive effort for 16-inch softball.

Campbell lauded Welker's pitching performances and the outfield work of Nay and Dewey Hryerk. The infield, composed of Bill Nay at third, Duval at short, Pitts in short center, Ostrowski at second and Ieral at first also played superbly, turning in "seven or eight" double plays during the title chase.

Campbell added that the other members of the club, Tim Proyema, Gene Freeze, Ron Soucek, Bob Demarchi, Charlie Winde, Greg Parker and Gil Murtori, will join the aforementioned 10 on the trip to the national finals.

The national tournament will include 32 teams from 28 states and will be a double-elimination affair. The Bobcats, a Chicago outfit, have won the national title three years running and thus are automatically seeded into the second round of the nationals. Campbell said there would be local television coverage of the tourney in the St. Louis area.

So after four tries the Bruins have finally qualified for the nationals. And it's a good bet that with continued efforts such as they put on in Chicago, the Bruins will be in the thick of the fight for the national 16-inch softball champion-ship.

Set Registration In Palatine Hockey

Registration will be held for the Palatine Amateur Hockey League at the Park District Administration Building, 282 E. Palatine Rd., beginning Saturday, Sept. 2 and continuing through Saturday, Oct. 21. Hours will be 9-5 during the week and 9-12 on Saturdays.

Boys who wish to try out for one of the traveling teams must register by Sept. 16

Hank Chasing TWO Marks

The most talked about baseball record these days, of course, is whether Hank Aaron will overtake Babe Ruth in career home runs. But what many fans do not realize is that Aaron also is chasing the Babe's record for most runs batted in ever. Ruth had 2209 lifetime. Aaron started this season with 1960 but already has passed Lou Gehrig (1991) for second place on the all-time list with only Ruth to catch.

except Mites who have until Sept. 30.

Each boy must bring positive proof of age and at least one parent to sign up. The league takes no medical responsibilities.

Tryouts will be held at the Arlington Ice Spectrum Sept. 18-22 from 5:30 to 7:20 p.m. The only purpose of tryouts is to pick traveling teams. There will be no cuts from the program. Each boy between the ages of seven and 16 who registers by Saturday, Oct. 21 will be placed on a team and play in the games.

There will be a new Mite traveling all-star team this year. All of the traveling teams are in addition to the regular house program. A team jersey and goalie equipment will be provided. The boys must provide their own helmet, external mouth guards, heavy gloves, sticks, skates and pads.

The house league teams will have indoor ice at the new Spectrum on a regular basis from Oct. 31 through March 24. In addition to indoor ice, there will again be a full schedule of outdoor practices and games in January and February. All told, each team will have about a 30 to 35-game season with 18 to 20 games outdoors.

House league fees will be as follows: First boy in family, $15 for residents; $20 for non-residents in the Mite Division. For the Squirt, Pee Wee, Bantam and Midget Divisions: first boy in family for residents and $35 for non-residents. There will be a $5 discount for each boy after the first in a family for residents only.

Other information on the program, including that pertaining to leagues, practices and equipment for traveling teams, can be obtained from the Palatine Park District.

60 Cyclists Battle At Santa Fe

Santa Fe Speedway hosts the "Carroll Resweber Motorcycle Classic" this Wednesday night, Aug. 30, with at least 60 cyclists vying for top honors in a 10-lap main event on the half-mile clay oval. Starting time is 8:30 p.m. with time trials set for 8 p.m.

With this August 30 American Motorcycle Association-sanctioned program, Santa Fe Speedway concludes its 20th year of exclusive weekly Wednesday night cycling shows. The southwest side clay oval will host two more TT (tourist trophy) cards on Friday night Sept. 1 and 8.

Favored for the Resweber Classic is Robert E. Lee from Fort Worth, Texas. Other riders contending for top honors include Barry Gerald, Baton Rouge, La.; Charlie Chapple, Flint, Mich.; Michael Johnson, Flint, Mich.; and Billy O'Brien, Waukegan, Ill.

Santa Fe Speedway presents regular weekly stock car programs every Saturday and Sunday night through September.

Santa Fe Speedway is located at 91st and Wolf Road approximately 20 minutes from downtown Chicago via the Stevenson Expressway.

Single Engines For Outboard World Feature

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sponsors of the annual Outboard World Championship are taking a new tack this year — single engines and tunnel-type hulls only.

The purpose, says race director Robert McCulloch, in announcing that the ninth running of the $60,000 event will be held Nov. 25 - 26 at Lake Havasu City, Ariz., will be to provide "more of a man-to-man test."

Since the inaugural event in 1964, winners each year have been powered by multiple engines, mostly twins, although a three-engine craft took the title in 1967.

Let's Update Our Teaching

Our public schools will never become the utopia of teacher competence of which some administrators dream. But definite strides can be made in upgrading teacher performance.

School administrators estimate between 50 and 75 per cent of their teachers are truly good teachers. As for the failures, they say about one out of every 100 or more teachers are encouraged to leave in one year.

Whatever the statistics, we think the districts should do a better job of teacher training.

Obviously, training is particularly important for first year teachers. University education courses are constantly under fire for their lack of realism and relevancy. Teachers need counseling that will relate their courses to actual classroom experience.

But more than that, the established teacher needs to keep abreast of changes in the profession. A teacher who was modern four years ago may be using antiquated techniques today.

Teachers must recognize the transient nature of their profession and be willing to accept change for the sake of improvement. If they aren't willing, the administrators cannot force progress.

In the same sense, school boards must make a full commitment to improving the quality of their teaching staffs. This not only means hiring top candidates, but following up with in-service training. School boards must not gamble with mediocrity in the classrooms.

Currently, the state allows districts to hold five half-day workshop sessions for teachers each year. In addition the state gives the districts funds for four full-day institute sessions.

While the state's intent may be good, half day sessions scattered weeks apart are simply not enough, nor are four institute days. Such a program lacks the continuity and length necessary for an in-depth examination of teaching practices.

A far better approach is the two weeks marathon recently sponsored by St. Viator High School in Arlington Heights. The teachers' egos were not spared as they heard criticism of their all-too-familiar techniques. But no one quit.

The teachers were there to take a hard look at individual teaching methods and to see if together they could reach a better understanding of their profession. Public school districts may argue this is all well and good, but they don't have the Viatorian's private source of funds.

Yet new budget priorities should release additional funds for public school teacher training. Expenditures for better facilities or better programs are not going to help unless the same attention is given to producing better teachers.

Rescheduling plans are also possible solutions. A Massachusetts school district has launched a new program which adds an hour to each of four school days every week and releases students on Fridays. The teachers use the fifth day for planning and self-improvement. The program reportedly retains the regular number of class hours at no extra cost.

Beyond the local districts' responsibility, the state must offer more financial and legal encouragement to improve teacher training.

It will take contributions from all sides. But with the teachers' willingness, the school board's direction and the state's assistance, we can set new standards of teacher performance in our schools.

Patients' Rights

A recently enacted law in Florida may make it necessary to roll voting machines into mental hospitals on election day.

Or so claims Robert S. Furlough, administrator of special programs for the state's Division of Mental Health. The right of mental patients to cast ballots will be one side effect of the law, which is aimed at ending the social and legal stigma of hospitalization for mental illness.

Written by Rep. Maxine Baker of Miami and called a "bill of rights" for mental patients, the new law ends the practice still common in most states whereby patients are committed to mental hospitals by judicial order, with accompanying loss of their civil rights as if they were criminals.

Florida now recognizes mental illness as a disease requiring treatment rather than a legal situation involving loss of rights.

Actually, it's highly unlikely that many mental patients will try to exercise their right to vote. But theoretically they could, and Furlough notes that in one town in northern Florida, patients in the state mental hospital outnumber residents by 7,995 to 4,500.

Should anyone be disturbed at the prospect of mental patients participating in such a serious matter as an election, he need not reflect that, like anybody else, they would be pretty much confined to voting for whatever candidates are on the ballot.

If it is the mental condition of this or the other candidate or this or the other party that is suspect (a charge not unknown in politics) — well, that's a different kettle of fish entirely.

Dorothy Meyer's Column

Dorothy Meyer

There are never enough hours in the day for the working mother and everybody knows that part of it is the what's-for-dinner-shop-on-Saturday-catch-up-with-the-ironing syndrome. But there's another nasty combination that nibbles away at our time which how to be a Working Wife articles never mention. That's the make-an-appointment-get-an-estimate-lake-a-number complex. And it's getting more time-consuming every day.

Last week I had to make an appointment to make an appointment. And I've had to get an estimate of what it costs NOT to fix our television set. And I've taken so many numbers I feel like I'm in the rackets and the FBI must think so too because at my age there'd be no other reason a guy in a trench coat follows me everywhere I go.

I've even had to take a number to make an appointment to get an estimate. Lately I've also had dealings with a department of the government and that's even worse than trying to catch up with the ironing. When you call a government office you get transferred a lot, and every time you get transferred you have to state your name and social security number and wait five minutes after your newest contact says, "Just a moment, please." Only in my case they say, "Just a moment, SIR," because I have a deep voice and that's dumb because how many men named Dorothy do you know.

When I'm not wasting time hanging onto what appears to be a dead line until the next person tells me just a moment sir, I'm on the telephone getting estimates because everything we own is suddenly wearing out or falling apart. Currently it's the television set.

The last time our set went black I called a guy who came over with his tube tester and replaced a couple of dead ones in a minimum amount of time for a reasonable amount of money. This time we paid for a house call, ambulance service and a bench analysis. A bench analysis, yet! From the cost there must have been a couple heart specialists in on the consultation. Then we were told that if we decided not to go through with the operation it would cost another eight dollars to have our set brought back home so it could die in the arms of its loved ones. When I was a kid I had my tonsils out for less than it costs to not fix a television set these days — not counting my precious time spent making an appointment to get an estimate.

Making appointments has gotten more involved lately, too. Everybody I want has an answering service when I'm not in and they're never in when I call. The other day I hit it lucky though — the woman at the answering service was an old friend I hadn't seen in a long time and we had a nice chat. And I got an appointment with the secretary of the guy I want an appointment with.

Well I gotta go now. I have an appointment to take a number at the bakery.

Fence Post Letters To The Editor

Brown's Anti-Pesticide Stand Praised By Reader

I like to take the opportunity offered by "The Public's Issue" editor to inject a few things into the dialogue between Clayton W. Brown, the author of the article "Chemical Curbs Needed" (Herald, Aug. 2) and Eugene E. Taylor who blasted Brown's stand against the pesticides and herbicides (Herald Aug. 16).

At the very beginning of his article, Taylor questions Brown's qualifications. He names a long list of scientists who, supposedly, are the only ones qualified to discuss the poisonous properties of chemicals.

True, Brown did not illustrate with figures or examples the poisonous effects on plant and animal life by such chemicals as dieldrin, endrin, aldrin, parathion and chlordane which was synthesized in Veliscol Chemical Corporation's laboratories. Thus he makes himself quite vulnerable to a highly trained and experienced scientist like Eugene Taylor. He is the National Sales Manager of Agricultural Chemicals of Veliscol which is his "bread and butter" and, therefore, he deems it his duty to defend the products his company manufactures.

Mr. Taylor praises his company for its thorough research and extensive experimentation in compounding a chemical before it is put on the market. He says: "Environmental studies include the rate of dissipation from the soil and water, the effects on fish and wild life, the effects on soil and micro-organisms and the effects on beneficial insect species and crops."

All this sounds very impressive. But why not tell the public that the chemical manufacturers' responsibility ends at the point when the product leaves the laboratories and is put on the market? Why not tell the public what may happen to the product when it is released in the form of a spray or dust in nature's laboratory? Evidence is available that a slight reaction may produce a little twist in the molecular structure and make it five times as poisonous.

Let's examine the effects of at least one poisonous chemical, the endrin, which is synthesized in Veliscol's laboratories. Who hasn't heard about the "Mississippi River Fish Kill"? It occurred in the fall of 1963 along the Louisiana coast. Five million dead fish were floating, belly up, in the great river which provides drinking water for over one million people, and supports a substantial portion of this country's fishing industry.

Two biologists, Donald Mount and Alfred Grzenda, traced this massacre of fish to the chemical endrin, which in turn was traced to Veliscol's chemical plant at Memphis, Tenn. The plant discharged wastes into a lake which flowed into Wolf River, a small tributary of the Mississippi. Fortunately for the public, the Veliscol Chemical Corp. came under new ownership which cooperated with the Federal Water Pollution Control Administration. The discharge of poisonous wastes was stopped, and with it ended "the big fish kills."

Other agricultural chemicals, such as aldrin, dieldrin, chlordane and parathion, possess similar killing properties which endanger not only plant and animal life but also the human race. All these chemicals have been used as sprays and dust to control Japanese beetle, fire ant, gypsy moth and other insects. The effects of these sprays and dustings were disastrous to wild life — birds, squirrels, muskrats and even cats and some sheep.

Taylor tries to defend chlordane on the grounds that it breaks down in soil through weathering, microbial action and hydrolysis. The public should be informed that this chemical has all unpleasant attributes of DDT. It may be absorbed through the skin, may be breathed in as a spray or dust and absorbed from the digestive tract if residues are swallowed with food. It is accumulative in nature. A diet containing only small amounts of chlordane as 25 parts per million may eventually lead to a concentration of 75 ppm.

There should be no debate that chemical curbs are needed. The human society must move fast in this direction if we are to make our environment safe and clean for our children. Let's step on toes of chemical companies if we must.

Township Editorial Applauded

In your Aug. 22 editorial, "It's Not Time For This Vote," may I say this is one of the most timely editorials and one of the finest I have ever read, concerning township government.

I go along with you completely. Some day township government will be eliminated because that is the basic start of our tax structure and tax reduction in government will start at this source.

When I see the large number of needy persons getting relief from the townships, when they cannot get relief otherwise, it is then mandatory that we retain township government at present.

When a better and more efficient and proven system can take its place, then and only then would I recommend elimination of township government.

Boys In Little League Are 'The Greatest'

In your Fence Post Letters To The Editor, there have been several articles criticizing today's youth. How about some praise for today's youth instead of the constant criticism?

As manager of the Henry's Drive In and Wheeling Pony League All Stars baseball teams, I feel that I have had the privilege of being associated with boys that not only possessed exceptional baseball ability but were outstanding examples of the young gentlemen Wheeling is turning out today.

During regular Little League season play as well as tournament games with adjacent villages, these boys worked together as a team and displayed sportsmanship that Wheeling should be proud of.

The boys certainly deserve a "pat on the back," because they are a credit to Little League baseball, the parents, their schools, myself and the village of Wheeling.

A special thanks goes to these boys from me — I think they're the greatest. If these boys are examples of the youth that will be running this great country of ours in the next decades, then we "old timers" have nothing to fear.

Word-A-Day

Business Today

by LEROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The land developers, the firms that buy raw land, break it up into lots, put in streets and utilities and then sell the lots to builders and the public, are an embattled tribe.

Over the years the industry has been hit by recurrent scandals — the sale of lots lying under water at high tide, alluring advertisements that misrepresented both the property and the terms of sale.

The land developers frequently are engaged in political brawls as well — for example, trying to persuade reluctant local authorities to permit them to develop tracts for high rise apartment buildings or very small residential lots. The local authorities are reluctant because the resulting increase in population would boost school, police and fire, sewerage and utility costs.

MORE RECENTLY the developers have come under attack for grabbing up wilderness recreational land and outlying suburban farming acreage, and bringing on the bulldozers to break it up into improved lots. The developers are abetted in this activity by the greed of local and federal tax authorities, who insist on taxing land either annually or for inheritance purposes, on the basis of its "highest and best," i.e. most profitable potential, use instead of the use to which the owner might want to put it.

This frequently compels owners of such lands to sell them to developers even if they'd rather keep them in farm or woodland.

To deal with these perplexing social and ethical problems, the American Land Development Association (ALDA) was created about two years ago. According to Martin Price of McLean, Va., president of the Virginia state association, the American Land Development Association now represents more than 400 firms and around 75 per cent of the interstate operators in the land development business.

Price said the association engaged first in a housecleaning operation and established a code of ethics to stop misrepresentation and such crude practices as selling lots in the middle of swamps.

"Next we set out to combat the notion that land developers are hustlers who hate trees, level mountains without reason, or pollute streams and lakes," he said.

BUT THE ALDA ALSO is an industry trade association. It stages periodic national land conferences and publishes a monthly magazine, "American Land," and several trade news letters about legislative and commercial developments in the trade.

Finally, Price said, the ALDA endeavors to cooperate with federal and local agencies at all levels and with environmental agencies "to upgrade the land development industry to serve the needs of the community and nation."

Price said this included combating the efforts of local lawmakers to endorse unduly discriminatory zoning rules against high rise apartments and small lot homes.

But he conceded that up to now, the land developers remain wedded to the "highest and best use" theory of the utilization of land, so they have not taken any stand on the question of the use of high real estate and inheritance taxes to force people to sell farming or wilderness recreational lands to developers.

The need for a program such as that of the ALDA is underlined dramatically by a letter to the editor of the New York Times from a cattle rancher in Arizona. He said the activities of unscrupulous developers are partly responsible for the present beef shortage. He said these outfits buy up arid grazing land at $500 an acre and sell it at up to $15,000 without any real improvements by means of deceptive advertising. The chief victims of this swindle, the cattle rancher said, are young soldiers and sailors overseas, hoping to establish themselves on "ranchettes" after their discharge.

International Harvester To Sell Line In Poland

CHICAGO (UPI) — International Harvester Co. says it has concluded an agreement for the manufacture and sale of heavy construction equipment with a government-owned factory in Poland.

An International Harvester spokesman announced Sunday that the agreement licenses the Polish factory — Huta Stalowa Wola — to manufacture the Harvester line of heavy crawler tractors and sell them in Poland and other Communist countries under the Harvester brand name.

The factory also will produce certain components of the construction equipment and purchase other components from Harvester plants in the United States and Europe, according to Omer Voss, International Harvester executive vice president who negotiated the agreement.

Voss said some of the components manufactured in Poland would be purchased for use in International Harvester's European plants.

He said it was the first agreement negotiated by a major U.S. manufacturer of heavy construction equipment with an East European Communist country.

International Harvester recently announced an agreement for the sale of $40 million worth of heavy crawler tractors and related construction equipment to the Soviet Union.

Largest Phone Switching Center Opens In Oak Brook

Introduction of the largest telephone switching center of its kind was completed Aug. 20 in Oak Brook to serve the west section of the Chicago metropolitan area and long distance points throughout the nation.

The center will process telephone calls among central offices as well as with long distance centers. It will provide better service for customers located from Chicago's Loop northwest to Dundee and southwest to Aurora.

Callers within this area should benefit from faster completion of both their local and long distance calls, fewer circuit busy signals and better quality of transmission. The switching center is a joint operation of Illinois Bell and Long Lines Department of American Telephone and Telegraph Co.

"We have been anticipating the benefits the Oak Brook center gives us since before the ground was broken for the new building in February 1970," Illinois Bell's west suburban general manager Robert H. Clewlow said. "This new switching center is the most modern in the country and has many unique features."

The Oak Brook center provides connections between 44 local offices and 97 long distance centers ranging from coast to coast. It utilizes nearly 8,000 trunk lines to complete calls in the Chicago area and 3,300 long distance trunks.

A new building at 1000 Commerce Dr. in Oak Brook houses the switching center. It is also the headquarters for Illinois Bell's west suburban operations.

The building also houses a "technical assistance center," which provides analysis and help in solving problems of electronic switching systems throughout the Chicago suburban area. A "service control center" coordinates handling of off-hour telephone service and repair problems for the entire west suburban area. Switching equipment for Picture-phone service — both for within Oak Brook and the inter-city link with Chicago — is also located in the building.

The new switching center is part of Illinois Bell's ongoing construction program. The company has been spending over $1 million a day for service improvements since 1969.

"With the growth of the western suburbs continuing at one of the highest rates in the nation, the Oak Brook complex is a key to our efforts in keeping up with this growth," Clewlow said.

Architect for the Oak Brook building was Holabird and Root, and the general contractor was W. E. O'Neil Construction Co. Equipment for the switching center was manufactured and installed by Western Electric Co.

FREE TRIP TO Puerto Rico was won by Mr. and Mrs. William Kessler, 1361 June St., Palatine, at recent benefit raffle sponsored by the Palatine North Little League. Congratulating the couple is Robert A. Howey, right, vice president and general manager of Around the World Travel, Inc., Palatine, which donated the four-day trip.

TRAVEL LORE

by Clare Wright,
TRAVEL EDITOR

Someone asked us the other day: "Do you always follow the 'travelers' suggestions' you give to others?"

We try to. But sometimes we goof. Like getting enough rest ahead of time before an overseas flight.

That's really a MUST for enjoying a trip abroad. Be well organized, keep calm, get your packing done early, and try to go to bed at least one hour before your usual bedtime one or two nights before your departure date.

Another mistake we seem to keep making in our travels is taking too many clothes. Although we're getting much better at traveling light, we still seem to return from a trip with at least one item of apparel we could very well have left at home.

A friend of ours who has been around the world several times has a good rule of thumb when it comes to packing for her trips.

"If you're going to be traveling for a month, just pack like you would for a long holiday weekend."

This seasoned traveler never runs out on a wild shopping spree before she leaves on a trip. Instead, she sticks to the tried-and-true things she has in her clothes closet.

"I make sure everything I take along has had at least a month or two of wear at home so it's comfortable for traveling and I feel right in it," she says.

Of course, the first thing you should do is check the weather conditions where you're going. A handy folder that can help you is one you can obtain free by writing TWA Travel Advisor, 605 Third Ave., New York, New York 10016.

Wherever you go — except in very tropical climates — be sure to take an all-weather coat you can wear day or night.

Rely on the terrific synthetic fabrics in your travel wardrobe. The double-knit polyester suits and sports coats for men are ideal.

For the ladies — remember to mix and match. Build your wardrobe around a favorite color and you can't go wrong.

Don't forget the convenient "extras" when you pack — items like spot remover, sewing kit and extra buttons, first-aid kit, sun glasses (extra pair if they're prescription), lint brush, safety pins, travel alarm clock, washcloths and your favorite soap, pocket packs of cleansing tissues, packaged moist towelettes, plastic clothesline and clips, scotch tape for sealing bottles, a plastic bottle of liquid detergent and plenty of plastic bags.

Just last night we packed our bag (and helped Billy and Susi get theirs ready) for our trip to Ireland. In fact, just a few hours after this column is finished we'll be boarding an Aer-Lingus jet at O'Hare to fly to Dublin.

Knowing that the Irish climate is a bit on the coolish side in August we remembered to take sweaters. Not too many, though, because the boys in those handsome Irish wool sweaters are great.

All four of us are each taking two pairs of shoes — and we've made sure they're comfortable — even the dress shoes. We're wearing the dress shoes on the flight and packing the casuals.

Yesterday my husband remembered to have our cameras (movie and stills) and flash units checked out. Since his movie camera is Swiss-made he has to remember to register with the U.S. Customs at O'Hare to show proof of prior ownership when we return to the States.

He also stopped to pick up travelers' checks and copies of several prescriptions we might need while we are away — plus an extra supply.

Incidentally, packing medications and cosmetics can sometimes leave unseasoned travelers in a quandary. Last year I found a cosmetic case that's ideal for traveling. It's large enough to hold everything I need, yet small enough to fit into my carry-on flight bag. I keep the plastic jars and bottles filled with cold cream, lotions, skin freshener and all the other necessary items at all times. I also have extra supplies of make-up necessities stashed in the case. It's always ready to go at a moment's notice.

In another zippered plastic bag I keep all manicuring equipment — in another, hair setting supplies — and in another, toothbrush and case, toothpaste, mouthwash (in a plastic bottle) washcloths and soaps.

Packing these essentials in this fashion makes it extremely handy when you arrive at your various destinations. Everything is very easy to get to.

As for medications — these are also always contained in their own separate case for easy availability.

Do we always follow our own suggestions? As soon as this column is finished we're going to eliminate at least two items of apparel from our suitcase, drop off an extra set of house keys and car keys (and our itinerary) at a neighbor's — and shoe everybody off to bed for a good night's sleep!

Many Dating Back To Middle Ages

Belgians Proud Of Their Castles

by CLARE WRIGHT
BRUSSELS, Belgium — Maybe you thought all the European castles were in England — or France — or Germany.

Couple Wins Free Trip To Puerto Rico

Little did the William Kesslers of Palatine realize what a good play it was to buy all of their son's raffle tickets for a benefit staged by the women's auxiliary of the Palatine North Little League recently.

The lucky ticket won them a free four-day trip to San Juan, Puerto Rico, which the couple, of 1361 June St., Palatine, will use this fall to celebrate their wedding anniversary.

The Caribbean trip was donated to the organization by Around the World Travel, Inc., Palatine travel agency.

The Kesslers' son, Brian, 13, pitches and catches for the Dean Foods team which won this year's championship in its division of the Palatine North baseball loop. He had a book of 10 tickets to sell and talked his father into taking all of them.

It was probably the luckiest buy William Kessler ever made.

Perhaps you didn't realize that each of Belgium's nine Provinces boasts many similar architectural jewels that crown the beauty of their settings.

We didn't either. But we soon found out how proud the Belgians are of their ancient castles — many of them dating back to the Middle Ages.

If you're staying here in Brussels many of the most interesting castles are nearby.

JUST NORTH of the city, at Laeken, is the Brussels residence of King Baudoin and Queen Fabiola. Known as the Royal Domain, the extensive parks and woodlands that surround the chateau are open to the public and a favorite place for Sunday strolling. At certain times the Royal greenhouses are also open to visitors.

Less than ten miles south of Brussels, just off the highway to Mons, is the Chateau of Gaesbeek — also open to the public. Set amid landscapes the artist Bruegel is known to have painted, the chateau itself is not as eye-catching as near-by Beersel (a real fairytale castle with a moat) but the site is of great historical interest, and the sumptuous interiors are well worth visiting, as are the grounds.

The Castle of Beersel is a remarkable example of a stronghold of the Middle Ages. Built in the 12th century, the last proprietor, the Count of Grunne donated it in 1925 to the Historical Dwellings of Belgium Association, who undertook the complete restoration of the fortress. Seasonal historical spectacles are held in the courtyard of the castle.

Six miles north of Brussels, the Castle of Beaulieu offers a completely different aspect in comparison to Gaesbeek and Beersel. It is a beautiful example of a lordly dwelling of the Renaissance. The Duke of Marlborough, ancestor of Winston Churchill, established his general headquarters here after the Battle of Ramillies in 1706.

Thirty miles from Brussels — and most certainly worth the trip — is the interesting city of Ghent where the Castle of the Counts is located. This is probably one of the best known of Belgium's ancient fortresses. It was built in the 12th century along the lines of the crusaders' castles in the Holy Land.

In 1872 the castle was partially restored. Certain rooms contain objects relating to the history of the chateau. The dungeons in the Castle of the Counts are a reminder that all was not chivalry when knighthood was in flower!

CASTLE OF THE COUNTS, one of the Middle Ages city of Ghent, the best known ancient fortresses in Belgium, is a popular attraction in which is built on more than 80 small islands lined by numerous bridges.

Suburbanites On The Go

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Slavrnski, 932 Tower Dr., Mount Prospect, have just returned home after a vacation visit to Horseshoe Bend in Arkansas.

Because of its beautiful natural setting and complete facilities for indoor and outdoor recreation, Horseshoe Bend — in the Ozark foothills on the picturesque Strawberry River — has become one of the country's most popular vacation resort communities.

It is also the site of the new multimillion dollar health resort and spa, Hill-high.

'A Night Of Exploration'

Women Eagerly Share Their Experiences

by DOROTHY OLIVER

I sat cross-legged on the floor — my knees, back and elbows bumping into their bodies. More than 230 women shared the auditorium with me last week and despite the close quarters and billows of cigarette smoke that were filling the room, there was an atmosphere of excitement, curiosity and anticipation.

We were attending a program by the Postgraduate Center at Forest Hospital, Des Plaines, introducing women to a proposed 10-week series which will explore "Who am I, what am I and what do I want to be?" This program was called "We As Women: A Night of Exploration" and the audience had been promised a film and an opportunity to share feelings and experiences.

Anita Brown, social therapist who planned this program and the series, sat in wonderment as the women streamed into the auditorium. When she first conceived the idea, she questioned whether area women would show any interest.

"I WAS ECSTATIC at the response. I originally expected 30 or maybe 50 women. I think the number who did turn out indicates that somewhere along the line . . . we hit a nerve. Each had a reason for coming . . . curiosity, to see the movie, to find out more about themselves," she said.

They came from all over the north and northwest suburbs. Attendance lists were signed Miss, Mrs. and Ms. with addresses in Evanston, Palatine, Northbrook, Chicago, Barrington and every suburb in between. There were women of every age — from 17 to nearly 70 — thrown together for this experience.

We received an enthusiastic welcome from Anita. Then she explained her goals for this evening and the series. We would see a film, "Growing Up Female," and draw our own conclusions; we would break up into groups after the film to discuss our reactions; we would share feelings, thoughts and experiences. We were women joining with other women for a better understanding of what it is to be a woman.

"GROWING UP FEMALE" filled the screen and each sat back to watch the story of six women in six stages of life unfold. We saw the child at nursery school and heard her teacher describe the difference between little boys and little girls. Boys, she explained, are rougher, friendlier with each other, more active. Girls already show jealousy, they have a shorter attention span, they flit from one thing to another, and busy themselves with girl things.

We watched the 11-year-old tomboy bursting with curiosity, dancing with girls, giggling, jumping creeks, exploring life. We heard her mother tell how she is trying to get her daughter to wear dresses and show some interest in boys. Her father explained the importance of femininity.

We watched a 16-year-old (who was planning to be married by '19 or 20 at the maximum") attend her classes at a vocational school. We saw her in cosmetology class and heard her instructor expound on the importance of beauty and being feminine. We saw her in a marriage counseling course and heard her teacher explain some of the rules of marriage: "You let him make the decisions. Of course you try to help, talk about it but the decision is his . . . You take care of him, do the laundry, keep the house . . . You remember that he is tired after a day of making a living . . ."

THE PROJECTOR broke down before the second half of the movie could be shown but Anita described the other three women we would have seen. There was the 18-year-old who had moved from her small town to the big city. Everything was "cool and groovy" living alone. Everything was "buy the groovy clothes and do the groovy things." In contrast an advertising executive explained how women are "suckered" into buying their products and the data processing manager explained how perfect women were for the dull, tedious, boring job of key punching.

There was the black woman, living alone with her child, who had to work and leave her child in a day care center. She talked of her guilt, her desire to be married again, her feelings of loneliness. There was the middle-aged mother who lived a common life and spoke of her dislike for housework, her dull routine. When asked if she would change something if she could, she answered simply, "I wouldn't get married."

WE BROKE INTO groups — each of us touched by some part of the movie. It provided a good stimulus for discussion. A social therapist led each group, trying to keep things going smoothly while allowing each person an opportunity to be heard.

"There was a lot of curiosity, excitement, listening, sharing, and opening up in my group," Anita said. "At one point we got into a discussion of men and I stepped in and tried to prevent playing the 'blaming game.' When we got to the point where we agreed that we were not talking about women's lib but human lib, we were okay. Instead of blaming we decided to start from this point and move on."

Other groups experienced similar discussions. My group contained several angry, hostile women who wanted to be human beings and felt they were kept from it. There also were women who were what they wanted to be, those who were working steadily towards it and those who hadn't given any thought to who they were or why.

The discussions went on — long past the 10:30 p.m. scheduled closing. There was laughter as one woman explained how she identified with the tomboy while another found she identified with that tomboy's mother. There was concern for the woman who was trying to talk to her husband about the changes taking place in her and receiving no caring or understanding. There was hostility shown towards the woman who seemed to think she had all the answers.

SIXTY-FIVE WOMEN signed up for the 10-week series designed to help them resolve some of the conflicts they face while exploring more deeply who they are. Again, Anita reacted with total excitement at the response.

"As we sat there talking, a lot of personal stories were told — there were women who needed an answer, they were asking for help and we couldn't stop and do problem solving. The series will give us that chance. They will continue as long as there is an interest," she said.

Consciousness-raising sessions are becoming a big part of the woman's lib movement. Women sit in a group with their peers telling their stories, sharing good and bad feelings, relying on each other for support and, often, guidance.

"Intellectually we can know a lot about what we think we are but I strongly believe that we have to feel it in order for it to be true," said Anita.

The 10-week series will deal on a similar intellectual level as a consciousness-raising session but the important difference will be that trained therapists will be present and group systems will be used to facilitate problem solving. It will be an opportunity to discuss, decide and resolve.

Married In Springfield

Two ring bearers, a flower girl, a maid of honor and four bridesmaids attended Lesley Ruth Baer Aug. 5 when she became the bride of Robert W. Behlke, son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Behlke, 2125 Vermont St., Rolling Meadows. Lesley is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Baer, Springfield, Ill., and the wedding took place in Temple Israel, Springfield.

The candlelight, double ring service took place at 8 p.m., followed by a dinner reception for 150 at the Lake Shore Country Club, Springfield.

Lesley's attendants were her sister, Linda, Springfield, as maid of honor, and the groom's sister, Linda Behlke, Rolling Meadows, her cousin, Ellen Levinthal, Glen Rock, N.J., Deborah Laws, Springfield, and Jeannine Rapp, O'Fallon, Ill., as bridesmaids.

Their floor-length gowns were in pink chiffon over taffeta fashioned with mandarin collars and Empire bodices. Ivory lace and matching pink satin ribbons accented the front of the bodices, and they carried brandy snifters with pink Sweetheart roses, miniature pink carnations, baby's breath and ivy greens.

THE FLOWER girl, 9-year-old Jan Marie Coats, Springfield, was in a gown fashioned after the bride's attendants' gowns, and she carried a basket with pink flower petals. Ring bearers were a cousin, Kenneth Plattner, 7, Carpentersville, and Kay Ann Coats, Springfield, also 7.

The bride wore a gown of Chantilly lace with natural waistline, sabrina neckline and full, bishop sleeves. Tiny pearls and sequins accented the front of the bodice, and the tiered skirt swept into a train. Lesley's chapel-length veil fell from a headpiece of Chantilly petals accented with seed pearls, and she carried roses, lily of the valley, stephanotis and baby's breath.

Daniel Semple, Maywood, was Robert's best man, and groomsmen were the couple's brothers, John Behlke, Rolling Meadows, and Steven Baer, Springfield, a cousin of the bride from North Hale-don, N.J., Robert Levinthal, and Roman Wegryn, Burbank, Ill. Steve Forster, Harwood Heights, and Alan Skierkiewicz, Chicago, were ushers.

The couple honeymooned for 10 days in Wisconsin and are now making their home in Peoria where Robert attends Bradley University. He is a graduate of Fremd High School. The new Mrs. Behlke graduated from Illinois State University in June with a B.S. in education and a major in English. She will be employed in Peoria.

Officer Installation

Ninth District American Legion Auxiliary, Department of Illinois, will hold installation of officers at 8 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 9, in River Grove School, River Grove.

Mrs. Bud Leder, River Grove, will be installed as president.

Mrs. Eric R. Sawdey

Wed In Rainbow Setting

Gail Laskowski, Palatine, and Eric R. Sawdey, Wheaton, were married Aug. 5 in a rainbow setting of pink, orchid, green and yellow. The double ring wedding took place at 2 p.m. in St. Theresa Church, Palatine.

Gail, daughter of the Norbert A. Laskowski, 490 W. Hellen Road, Palatine, and Eric, son of the Roland S. Sawdeys, Wheaton residents who have recently moved to Palos Verdes Peninsula, Calif., met as sophomores at Northern Illinois University. Both are now graduates of the university.

Gail is also a graduate of Fremd High School and she is now teaching seventh and eighth grade math and science in Watertown, Wis. Eric, who studied at Wheaton Central College before attending Northern, will now be attending graduate school, studying meteorology, at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, and the couple is living in a Watertown apartment.

A white, silk organza gown with Alencon lace trim was Gail's choice in wedding gown. The gown was made with boat neckline, long sleeves and train. A short veil and a colonial bouquet of white roses, daisies and carnations completed her ensemble.

ANNE SMITH, Palatine, was Gail's maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Lynn Buckner, Chicago, Sharon Schroeder, a cousin from Harvard, and Marye Anderson, the groom's cousin from Balsam Lake, Wis. Anne was in yellow, Lynn, in green, Sharon, orchid and Marye in pink. The girls made their own gowns of Dacron dotted swiss which they complemented with white accessories, colonial bouquets of white carnations and daisies to match their gowns and white picture hats trimmed to match the gowns.

Thomas Schoenau, Wheaton, was Eric's best man, and ushers were the couple's brothers, James and Larry Laskowski, Palatine, and Michael Sawdey, Wheaton.

A reception for 125 guests was held at the House of Norway in Bensenville after which the newlyweds left on a two-week, 1900-mile wedding trip to Toronto, Canada, and the eastern states with Maine as a destination.

School Bells To Ring For Clubwomen, Too

The kids won't be the only ones who go back to school next week.

For hundreds of women's club presidents and news chairmen school bells will ring Thursday, Sept. 7, and Friday, Sept. 8. These are the dates set for the Herald's ninth annual capsule news course for presidents and publicity chairmen of women's groups whose news is published in the women's pages of the Herald.

There's no matriculation fee, and the course, while informative also has its moments of merriment.

"Never a dull moment and the presentations were great!" wrote one of the women after last year's class. "I would have been lost in my job as publicity chairman if it hadn't been for your workshop," stated another.

A BIT OF nourishment will also be included during the sessions which open at 9 a.m. and close at 11:30. However, instead of cookies and milk, "coffee and" will be substituted. And of course there'll be "diplomas" for all.

The capsule course will cover the ABCs of writing club news releases and the low down on pictures. A helpful pamphlet will be given to those in attendance and it is expected that there will be a time for a question and answer period, too. Of special interest will be the slide presentation during the session on photo coverage.

Dear Dorothy: My next-door neighbor is most generous with the green peppers that he grows. However, you can have stuffed green peppers just so often before the family starts complaining. Can I freeze them? —Dorothea S.

They freeze beautifully. Clean them, chop them up and put into clean cottage cheese layers, a piece of foil between each layer. The peppers can be used in cooking the rest of the year and even be crisp enough to put into salads if added to the greens just before serving.

Dear Dorothy: A window was inadvertently left open, it stormed and my lined draperies have water marks on them. Is there anything that can be done about these very noticeable marks? —Mrs. James Samuel.

Generally, these are the worst kinds of permanent stains. It happened to me once so I took off the lining and washed the draperies in tepid water with a delicate soap flake solution. They did beautifully but not all draperies take to water.

Dear Dorothy: We have a concrete floor in our basement. Is there a paint which could be used now which would not interfere with our future plans of laying tile on this floor? —Mrs. John Fetsic.

If you are definitely planning on tile, don't paint. This is simply because all the paint will have to come off when it comes time to lay tile.

Dear Dorothy: To keep the robins and other birds out of the berry trees, try putting a three-foot length of black rubber hose in the branches. The birds apparently think the hose is a snake and won't light and dine. —Martha M. Pearson.

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

100 Mobile Park Residents Get OK To 'Go Home'

Elk Grove Village residents were still drying out yesterday in the wake of the worst rain and flooding in recent years.

Monday morning Red Cross volunteers reported that residents of the Elk Grove Mobile Home Park, 941 Higgins Rd., north of the village, could return to their homes. The volunteers said most of the water had receded and electrical power was restored.

Water supplies in the park were being checked for contamination and bottle gas supplies were being reconnected.

More than 100 people were evacuated from the park early Saturday when their power failed and their water became contaminated from the overflowing Salt Creek.

RESIDENTS COULD offer no estimate of damages to their trailers. It was estimated that less than 10 of the 170 trailers actually took in water.

Approximately 25 people were sheltered at Elk Grove High School. Another 25 families were taken to the Holiday Inn at Busse and Landmeier roads.

Emergency meals were provided by the Salvation Army. Capt. Wayne Griswold said 360 meals each for breakfast, lunch and dinner were served during the weekend. On Monday, 240 meals were served.

Griswold said emergency meals would be served as long as there was a need.

Griswold estimated that over 30 volunteers for the Salvation Army aided in the disaster. A spokesman for the Red Cross said approximately 25 volunteers from their agency worked during the weekend.

OTHER VOLUNTEERS from Schaumburg Civil Defense, Elk Grove Village Civil Defense Radio Club and Elk Grove Village Fire Department also assisted residents of the trailer court.

Elk Grove Village Fire Chief Allen Hulett said 20 homes in the village were pumped out.

An office building at 700 Nicholas, Centex North Plaza, had 375,000 gallons of water pumped out of it by the fire department. Hulett estimated damages to the office building at $1.5 million.

Hulett said the fire department pumped a total 1,750,000 gallons of water from homes and businesses.

Charles Willis, village manager, said preliminary estimates of damage to public facilities totaled $64,200. He said no figure was available yet on damage to private homes, but said between 20 to 30 homes were flooded.

THE ELK GROVE VILLAGE Public Library is expected to be closed for the rest of the week because of flood damage.

Mary Clark, administrative librarian, said water reached the ceiling in the basement of the building. She said toilets in the first-floor washrooms overflowed, soaking the carpeting. The library will be closed until the carpets can be dried.

Miss Clark said the only damage to the building was the loss of ceiling tiles in the basement. A 16 film projector was also destroyed.

A few books in the adult reference section suffered slight water damage from rain blown through the windows and roof leakage. No books or furniture suffered serious water damage.

A SPOKESMAN for Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59 said some schools had been flooded, but no damage estimate was available.

The spokesman said little property damage was reported in school buildings. It was estimated that most of the flood expense would be for extra labor and services to clean up the buildings.

Jack Claes, superintendent of the Elk Grove Park District, said Lions Park Pool was closed for the summer because of the flooding. Pool water was contaminated when Salt Creek overflowed its banks.

RESIDENTS OF THE Elk Grove Mobile Home Park were sheltered at the Elk Grove High School after they were evacuated from their homes following the flooding last weekend. The Salvation Army and Red Cross provided most of the emergency shelter and food until the families returned to their homes Monday.

Mobile Home Park To Seek Aid From State, County

Residents of the Elk Grove Mobile Home Park, north of Elk Grove Village, are seeking assistance from state and county agencies to prevent a recurrence of the flooding which occurred last weekend.

James Klutch and James Hotbedt, residents of the park on Higgins Road, want to set up a meeting with the owners of the trailer park to see what steps can be taken to build a retaining wall around the area. Residents hope that the state or county would pay for such a wall.

Residents claim that the building and improvements along Salt Creek which bring additional dumping of water into the creek are responsible for the flooding.

"We've already built a wall around the park. As high as we built the wall, the more water the state pours into the creek," said one resident. Several of the residents said they felt the state should prevent building along the creek.

There is a wall on the creek side of the park now. Residents say flood waters passed around the wall and flooded the park from the rear. One woman resident said, "We're going to try to meet to see what we can do about this constant flooding. We are not blaming the park or the owners. We are blaming the state."

Klutch said he had been in contact with Cong. Roman Pucinski, D-11th, for relief for the area. Pucinski said that representatives of the Small Business Administration (SBA) would be in the area later this week to investigate.

If government approval is granted, residents will be eligible for low cost loans to build or replace their trailers.

The park was ordered closed Saturday at 3 p.m. by the Cook County Health Department. Schaumburg Civil Defense and Elk Grove Village firemen evacuated residents by boat. About 25 families were taken to Holiday Inn at Busse and Landmeier roads and another 25 persons were given shelter at Elk Grove High School.

County Vehicle Tax Is Outlawed

Residents of unincorporated Cook County were victorious in their fight against the newly enacted county motor vehicle tax yesterday when the tax was ruled unconstitutional in Cook County Circuit Court.

Judge Raymond S. Sarnow said the tax on residents and businesses in unincorporated areas did not provide any additional services for those taxed and was "constitutionally offensive."

The tax, similar to charges for municipal vehicle stickers, imposes a yearly charge of $10 to $15 per car and graduated rates for trucks. Sarnow said the county tax ordinance failed to meet the requirements of the home rule provision of the 1970 Illinois Constitution, which allows large municipalities to levy taxes for special purposes.

The county ordinance is silent as to the special services gained from the tax and is absent of any indication that the money raised would be used to pay for special services, Sarnow said.

IN A HEATED discussion between attorneys outside the courtroom, State Atty. Paul Biebel promised an appeal of the decision. He said the decision was not made on the issues, only on his motion to dismiss the suit. Biebel had asked that the suit, filed by the Prospect Heights Improvement Association (PHIA) and the Cook County School Bus Company of unincorporated Elk Grove Township, be dismissed, on the grounds that the tax was constitutional.

"I don't feel it is over," Biebel said. "No affidavits have been filed, and the facts of the case are not being considered."

Edward Berman, attorney for PHIA and the school bus company, said, "If the tax is unconstitutional, there is nothing that could be pleaded to change the constitutionality."

"If it (the tax) is unconstitutional, it doesn't merit filing an answer," Berman told Biebel.

Jack Gilligan, chairman of the PHIA committee fighting the tax, said he was optimistic that the ruling would be in PHIA's favor. "I'm happy about the outcome," he said. "We had a good case, and the issues were reasonably clear."

Gilligan warned, however, that residents should not remove the stickers from their cars until the appeal is over. He also advised that residents who have not yet purchased the stickers to do so.

BERMAN SAID he and Atty. Donald Kroger would draw up a written order based on today's verbal ruling tomorrow for Judge Sarnow to sign. The judge made no decision on what to do with the vehicle funds collected in taxes earlier this year. The money is now being held in escrow and had been earmarked for the Cook County Sheriff's Department by Cook County Pres. George W. Dunne.

THE ANTICIPATED annual revenue hearings, Biebel pointed out that 90 per cent of the Sheriff's department budget goes to protect 191,000 persons in unincorporated Cook County.

The PHIA filed the suit on behalf of all residents in unincorporated Cook County. Homeowners groups in the area contributed to raise funds for the legal fight.

Disaster Relief Bill Just 2 Weeks Old

Federal officials yesterday were awaiting a declaration of inundated lands around the Salt Creek as a disaster area, an action which would mean full recovery of damages for hundreds of homeowners and low-interest loans for others.

Passage just two weeks ago of new legislation concerning disaster relief would mean that homeowners who suffered less than $5,000 damages would recover the full amount. Those who suffered more than that would be eligible for one per cent loans up to $50,000 for damages to real estate and $10,000 to personal property. Each loan would include a $5,000 "forgiveness."

U.S. Rep. Roman Pucinski, D-11th, explained the terms of the new legislation, and estimated after inspecting the afflicted area that a substantial number of the homeowners affected had losses of less than $5,000. If they substantiated their claims, their loans would simply be marked "PAID."

Estimates of damages in Cook County ranged up to $2.5 million to some 1,850 homes and 100 businesses. In DuPage County, an estimated 3,000 homes suffered up to $5 million damages.

In order to qualify property owners for the federal aid, either the Small Business Administration or President Nixon must declare the area as a "disaster."

BOTH PUCINSKI and Republican Sen. Charles H. Percy have asked the White House for the disaster declaration. After touring the area by rowboat Sunday, Percy declared that in some cases, damage was as bad as those in the recent Pennsylvania floods.

Pucinski said there was "no question

in my mind" that the declaration would be made.

He urged local officials to wire the White House asking for federal aid. He also advised homeowners and businessmen to obtain pictures, "preferably color pictures" of the damages in order to be able later to substantiate their claims.

Mayor Robert Teichert of Mount Prospect also said yesterday that he will ask the Department of Local Government Affairs to inspect the damage and to determine whether any state aid is available to victims of the flooding.

A spokesman for the Small Business Administration in Chicago said that field offices would be established as soon as possible if disaster aid is approved, and information on applications for funds would be distributed.

2 Fender Students Leave In Tears

by CINDY TEW

Two 12-year-old students of John C. Fender, one allegedly beaten by the recently fired teacher and the other a witness to the reported incident, emerged sobbing from a closed-door school board hearing in the case Friday.

Attorneys for Fender are attempting to prove that the language arts teacher uses no more corporal punishment than any other teacher in the district, and are attempting to have him reinstated by the school board. The fifth night of hearings is scheduled today.

"It was scarier than horror movies in there," sobbed a girl, allegedly hit several times by Fender. "They kept asking me questions then they wouldn't give me a chance to answer... they wanted me to demonstrate how it happened... I just couldn't do it."

According to the girl, Fender hit her "12 or 13 times across the back of the head and the face. He held my head up by my hair and hit me across the eye with something hard on his hand — I think it was a ring or something," she said. "Even now if I close my left eye, I can only see outlines out of my right eye."

"She had several bumps on her head, too," the girl's mother said. The family charged Fender with battery in a case now pending in circuit court.

Another juvenile witness emerged from the hearing room after 40 minutes of testimony also sobbing.

Also testifying for the school district was a 12-year-old boy.

"Someone was yodeling or something near me and Mr. Fender came over and banged my head against the table then hit me several times," he said.

Testifying for Fender was a 13-year-old boy who was in Fender's class the day a girl was allegedly beaten.

He said he had seen Fender hit students on two occasions.

"Mr. Fender is a good teacher — one of the best," he said. "He hardly ever hits anyone, only the trouble makers. And even then he gives the kids about 200 warnings — he talks, he talks again, then he yells and gets pretty aggravated."

Also speaking for the defense was Fred F. Brown, 17, of Arlington Heights, a former student of Fender.

"He was a very good teacher, he kept very good control over the class, and made it possible to learn for those who wanted to learn, and made it interesting, too," Brown said.

Mrs. Barbara Vincenzo, who has had three children in Fender's classes, said that he has been "a good teacher for my kids."

Also testifying for Fender were Earl Schatz and Arlene Wouff, teachers at Miner Junior High School, where Fender has taught for the past 10 years.

"In my opinion Fender is one of the best prepared, finest teaching colleagues I've met at Miner," Schatz said. "During my two years as department head, I was impressed by the amount of time Fender spent developing teaching materials."

Schatz also said that Fender had an ability to reach slow learners that other teachers couldn't reach.

Arlene Wouff, who has been in the district over 15 years, described an incident in which Fender aided her in dealing

Fender Granted 2nd Continuance

A second continuance in the trial of teacher John D. Fender, charged with battery of one of his students, was granted Friday by Cook County Associate Circuit Judge Anthony J. Scotillo. The new trial date, Sept. 28, was set for a jury trial in Evanston.

"This will be the final date," said Judge Scotillo. Friday's court date also had been stamped final by the judge but attorneys for Fender said they were not aware of that fact.

The lawyers explained that they were not properly prepared for the case as witnesses were out of town and research on the case had not been completed.

"We've been working on a school board hearing during the past three days, and I'm sorry we have not had time to prepare for this case," said attorney Edward Jackson. He also apologized to the Richard Calverts, the complainants, for not notifying them about their request for a continuance.

Jackson said he plans to file a motion to the effect that the battery charge is not a proper complaint.

with a student who had "sassed" her.

"I pursued the student down the hall after he yelled something either obscene or very lewd into my class. I asked him to apologize and say that he would never do it again, and he refused," said Mrs. Wouff. "We were near Fender's class and Mr. Fender came out and grabbed the student. The student swore at Fender before Fender struck him."

Mrs. Wouff also testified that her son had been in Fender's class and she felt

"he was a good teacher."

Over "strenuous and serious" objections of school district attorney Ralph Miller, the board continued the hearing until Monday night. Miller wanted the hearing to continue Saturday.

"In the spirit of fairness, we are willing to grant a continuance until Monday at 7:30 p.m.," said Board President Robert Powell. Fender's attorneys have continually complained of insufficient time to prepare their case.

Golf-Higgins Reroute Ready By November

Realignment of the Golf-Higgins roads intersection is to be finished in mid-November, when the junction will fully open to traffic.

Originally the intersection improvements, including special turn access lanes and signal lights, were to have been finished by Oct. 1, said Kap Lieu, project director for the state highway department. But preliminary work by utility firms slowed progress, Lieu said.

Currently Northern Illinois Gas Co. is relocating an 8-inch gas main. The move is to be finished this week, and work on the roadway then can be resumed, said Lieu.

Thus far, the state has completed sewer work. It next will form embankments relocating Higgins Road east of the intersection. Grading then will be started on the Golf Road segment north of the junction and final work will be grading the north half of Higgins Road west of the intersection.

After 8 Years Grandma Receives Master's Degree

by DAVID MAHSMAN

Lydia Erikson is a bubbly, active grandmother who likes to keep busy. And for the last eight years, keeping busy meant going to college.

Mrs. Erikson received her master's degree in special education last week from Northeastern Illinois University in Chicago. She has been going to school since 1964 (she got her B.A. in literature and linguistics in 1966) while also teaching full-time at Clearmont School in Elk Grove Village since earning her bachelor's degree.

Sipping coffee and chatting with Mrs. Erikson in her kitchen at 322 N. Harvard Ave., Arlington Heights, is like taking a break with Mom. At 50, Mrs. Erikson has only one granddaughter, "but that still makes me an authentic grandmother," she says.

Mrs. Erikson's narrow slits of smiling eyes sparkle in their frame of graying hair as she recounts her college career.

"It was fun to be with young people," she says of her two years as a full-time student working toward her B.A. She had gotten a two-year teaching degree more than 25 years earlier and decided to return to college when her youngest daughter entered first grade.

AS FOR THE "generation gap" in her last two years of undergraduate work, Mrs. Erikson says, "If you can see things within their (her fellow college students') frame of reference, you may not agree with them, but you'll understand them better."

Grandma Erikson went after her M.S. in 1967, going to school at night and in the summer.

"I really went back because I missed school," she says, pushing aside any thoughts that hers was a strictly scholarly endeavor. But going to school over so many years has given Mrs. Erikson something of a philosophy on the evolution of education.

"I've seen different cycles in education, but it always comes back to the 'three R's,'" said the new graduate, who once taught in a one-room country schoolhouse near Michigan City, Ind.

"All they do is put a new ribbon on the package."

So with that in mind, Mrs. Erikson crossed the stage last week to get her new sheepskin, her family watching from the audience.

"It was the greatest feeling," she remembers. "I felt like I was floating two inches off the stage."

"BUT BEFORE THE ceremony, I had to stand in line to get graduation tickets," she continued. "About 20 of us waiting got into a bull session, and I thought, 'This is what I'm really going to miss.'"

With that, one can only wonder if she soon will return to school for her Ph.D., even though she insists her next project is to learn to sew.

"I don't think I'll ever get my doctorate," she mused, then stopped, thought awhile and added, "But then I never thought I'd ever get my B.A. or M.A. either."

Old Tradition-Kids Work For Free Passes

Mammoth Beasts Raise The Big Top

by DAVID MAHSMAN

Like huge bulldozers they plod through the mud, towing semis, straining at ropes that will soon make a billowing sea of canvas rise from the earth like a Phoenix.

They are the mainstay of the circus, lords of flesh and bone and muscle that dwarf everything in sight — except maybe the big top they help erect. They are pachyderms — elephants to the uninitiated.

The Clyde-Beatty-Cole Bros. Circus has a dozen of these mammoth beasts, that are at the same time graceful and intelligent.

The scene is the lot adjacent to the Elk Club on the northeast corner of Ill. Rte. 53 and Palatine Road. The time is 8 a.m. Friday, and the circus — at least the 150 non-performers — is awake and preparing for the day's two shows.

THE NORMALLY-EMPTY lot has been transformed into a mini-city overnight. Trailers and campers belonging to the 300 circus personnel line the outskirts of the circus. The show's powerplants are readied to provide electricity to the complex. The staff members bid good morning to each other in a half-dozen different languages.

Dozens of local children — a prime reason for the circus' existence — have already arrived on the site, many of them signed on to be circus employees for a day. They seem eager to go to work and earn their free passes to the show.

Free passes for a morning's work — remember them? They are just one part of the circus tradition that Beatty-Cole public relations representative Don Perkins says his show tries to keep alive. Although the circus parade has been a thing of the past for many years, the sideshow and circus band remain.

Few innovations are allowed by this circus, the world's largest under canvas, Perkins says. Although a truck that rolls up the top — that's circus lingo for tent — each night, a gasoline powered stake driver that does the work of 20 men and bleachers that fold out of a trailer at the touch of a button now travel with the entourage, Beatty-Cole is largely the same type of circus America has known for decades. And, it looks like the circus will be with us for decades more.

"Circuses have never had it better," Perkins contends. "They are nostalgic, and we're in a nostalgic era. The circus is one of the few unobjectional places left to take kids."

BUT THAT MORNING it was the kids who dragged their mothers out of bed to take them to watch the circus set up.

"Look at the lion, the lion, Mon," a little girl squeals in delight, pointing at one of Dave Hoover's tigers.

Another tiger let out with a roar that could be heard across the lot.

"I'm gettin' out of here," screamed another young lady, who would probably feel safer petting the Shetland ponies grazing peacefully nearby.

"HEY YOU KIDS, get out of there," yells a shirtless, tattooed straw boss at two boys standing dangerously close to a taut rope with an elephant on one end and the rising big top on the other.

"Boy, elephants sure do have big toenails," one boy says in astonishment to his friend as they heed the disgruntled man's order. Toenails, yes, but teeth and tusks no. Animal keepers at the circus trim the elephants' teeth for safety. And bristly hair on the pachyderms' backs are also kept trimmed, not with shears, but with a blow torch.

The kids are everywhere by now, watching multi-colored flags flap in the breeze atop tents and a large banner that reads "Menagerie — Side Show" being hoisted like a sail above a sloop by two workmen.

Others stare in wide-eyed disbelief at sideshow posters that beckon them to see such strange sites as Serpentina Snake Trainer, Diablo the Human Volcano and Princess Ann, the world's smallest lady.

Still others tug at their mothers' skirts begging to be taken to the refreshment stand with its styrofoam hot dog hanging above the counter.

Performances won't begin under the big top until later in the day, but for the kids, the show already has started.

Charge Area Man In Hit-And-Run

A Palatine man has been charged with reckless homicide and leaving the scene of a fatal accident in connection with a hit-and-run incident on Palatine Road the night of Aug. 9.

Jack Eugene Cook, 42, of 1-59 Joan Dr., Palatine, told Arlington Heights police yesterday he was driving in the area and may have hit something the night that 19-year-old Mary Gabl was struck and killed by a car as she was walking home from a friend's house.

Police said yesterday they had not yet checked Cook's car to see if it could have been involved in the case.

He was released on $2,500 bond with a court date set for Sept. 22.

Land For Park In Limbo Pending End Of Dispute

by LYNN ASINOF

The Prospect Heights Park District will have to wait for the settlement of a dispute between Wheeling and School Dist. 23 before it can have Wheeling land set aside for park use.

For more than a year, the Prospect Heights Park District has been negotiating with Wheeling to have park sites placed on the official village map. The village, however, has placed a moratorium on designating land for school or park use until it reaches some agreement with Dist. 23.

The dispute centers on Dist. 23's refusal to grant easements from the Pleasant Run apartment development for a retention basin and two sewer lines on the John Muir School site. School board members do not want the retention basin on school property because they feel it would be a danger to children.

The developers of Pleasant Run, however, say water currently stands on the property and that a retention basin would improve the school site.

WHEELING OFFICIALS have taken the position that taxing bodies should work together. "We feel that if we do set aside public sites, if and when a developer wants to run utilities through there, they should let them," Village Mgr. George Passolt said.

To express their opposition to Dist. 23's refusal to grant easements, Wheeling officials have placed a moratorium on consideration of all school and park sites.

The Prospect Heights Park District, however, has become caught in the middle of this dispute. Because the park district boundaries extend into the Village of Wheeling, the park district must petition Wheeling to set aside land on its official village map for park use.

Once land is placed on the map for public use, the taxing body has one year to either buy the land or have it condemned for public use. If the taxing body takes no action on the land, the owner is free to develop it.

"I THINK THEY are kind of caught in the middle, as is everyone," Passolt said of the park district. "It's a bad situation."

Ronald Greenberg, superintendent of the Prospect Heights Park District, said he has never been told why the sites requested by the park district have not been placed on the official map.

Greenberg appeared at a recent village board meeting to protest the rezoning of one of the requested park sites between Cornell Avenue and Waterman Lane, south of Hintz Road. Because of the moratorium, the Wheeling board passed the zoning change, which will allow the development of a 300-unit condominium complex by Meister Neiberg Co., Inc.

Greenberg said he last spoke to Wheeling officials about the park sites at a Wheeling Plan Commission meeting last year. He said at that time the commission agreed to recommend passage of the sites.

"WE HAD COMPLETE agreement," Greenberg said. "We had no doubt in our minds, we had no question in our minds."

Greenberg said he is afraid that further delay in putting the sites on the map will mean the park district will lose valuable property.

"If I wait five years, it will be too late," he said. "We've been talking to the village for two years now, and we've lost out on possible valuable land. If we wait another five years we're going to lose it all."

While Greenberg's recent appearance at the board meeting was to protest a particular piece of land, he said he does not care where the parks are located in that area.

"WHETHER IT IS that piece or another piece, I don't really care," he said. "What I'm concerned about is that there is some piece of land set aside for park land in that area."

Greenberg pointed out that national standards say there should be 10 acres of land for every thousand people. "I presently have 8,000 residents. I should have 80 acres of park land," he said. "We presently own 12 acres of land. I am 68 acres behind the nationally published standards."

"I really cannot imagine, I cannot visualize, what the problem is in placing the park sites on the official map," Greenberg said.

He added that his park board is getting very discouraged about getting the park sites. "All they can see of this is that we're not going to get these sites from the village," he said. "They don't want to put them on the map."

SEN. ADLAI STEVENSON III was one of the guest speakers Monday when George Lauritzen, owner of Lauritzen and Co., 1197 Willis Ave., Wheeling, received the presidential "E" award for excellence in exporting. The firm produces wholesale bakery ingredients that are exported to more than 15 nations.

Stevenson Warns Of Protectionism

by STEVE FORSYTH

Sen. Adlai Stevenson warned against the dangers of protectionism as he lauded Lauritzen and Co. of Wheeling for winning the presidential "E" award for exporting.

The award was presented to George F. Lauritzen Monday afternoon for "excellence in exporting in recognition of outstanding contributions to the increase of U.S. trade abroad."

Stevenson said, "Today we see the tide of protectionism rising, and we ought to remember the times of the 30s." He said the country lost its foreign markets in every direction, and the Great Depression ensued. "I dare say it contributed to the rise of Hitler," he added.

"We cannot persuade other countries to pursue liberal trade policies by following un-liberal trade policies ourselves," Stevenson said. He explained that American businessmen face competition in systems different from that of the United States. In many nations business and government are not separate, he said.

"ONE OF THE greatest causes of trouble in the trade deficit (last year) was the failure of American companies to show their traditional drive," he said.

Stevenson praised Lauritzen for promoting foreign trade and at the same time "helping to feed a hungry world." The 29-year-old firm produces bulk ingredients for the baking industry.

The company exports to wholesale bakeries in 15 countries in Central and South America. Recently, Lauritzen has expanded its market to include Europe and the Far East.

The firm also sells a mineral and vitamin fortification used to produce a highly nutritious cereal for free distribution to the poor in foreign countries.

Stevenson's speech followed a presentation by Gerald Marks, regional director, Chicago office, of the U.S. Department of Commerce. Marks gave Lauritzen a certificate, a white flag bearing a blue "E," and a lapel pin.

MARKS EXPLAINED that exporting is important to Americans in many ways. "The purpose of world trade is to obtain abroad, goods and services which are either unobtainable or more expensive from domestic suppliers," he said.

"In the economic system, one of the functions of exports is in effect to obtain foreign money that allows us to pay for the imports, through the medium of foreign exchange rates. When our exports do not keep up with our imports, we cannot generate enough international money to pay for these imports," Marks said.

He said this shortage requires the government to revalue its money, resulting in higher costs for imports. "In 1971, for the first time since 1888, the amount of our imports exceeded our export by over two billion dollars. In 1972 the margin of imports over exports will be even greater," Marks said.

For that reason, the country seeks to aggressively increase the amount of exports by American firms, a task for which Lauritzen was lauded. Marks explained that the government is encouraging export through many business programs, including financial assistance.

LAURITZEN WAS honored on the lawn of his firm at 1197 Willis Ave., Wheeling, while about 100 guests enjoyed champagne and a buffet lunch under a canvas tent. A Dixieland band provided music.

Lauritzen and Co. has been in Wheeling since 1969. The firm was located several places in the Chicago area before settling in Wheeling.

Lauritzen is a native of Minneapolis, and attended Princeton University, Stevenson's alma mater. Stevenson said he and Lauritzen have several mutual friends.

Stevenson said early in his speech that coming to Wheeling was almost like coming home. "This is almost a home for me — not Illinois, but Wheeling. I spent much of my life near here." Stevenson grew up in the Libertyville area, and the Dist. 125 high school in Prairie View is named for his father.

Fact-Finding Next Step In School Pay Talks

Fact-finding will be the next step in Dist. 21 salary negotiations. The board of education approved the move Thursday night in reply to a written request from the Wheeling Faculty Council (WFC). The board approved the move at its regular meeting without going into executive session.

It also approved the recommendation of a special tax sheltered annuities committee to allow four new insurance companies to join four existing companies soliciting within the district. The companies were chosen after meeting eight requirements set down by the district.

Finally, the board approved the purchase of property for its 19th school site. The site is located off Jackson Drive near the Booth Tarkington and Carl Sandburg schools in Wheeling.

Board members also tabled one item — selecting a monitoring system for the entire district — and introduced a new policy that will be voted upon at the next meeting in two weeks.

THE POLICY DESCRIBES the actions of all parties involved in case a teachers' strike should be called this or any other school year in Dist. 21.

Supt. Ken Gill explained to the board the policy was not introduced because the contract has not been settled in the district. He said the district's attorneys, reviewing district policies, felt a strike procedure is necessary in case a strike should ever be called in the future.

In the meantime, the teachers and board are slated to go to fact-finding as soon as a fact-finder can be found. That can be anywhere from two weeks to two months, according to officials.

One board member said Thursday night it looks like the talks won't end until at least early November.

MARGO RICHTER, chairman of the

WFC said she was glad the board decided to go to fact-finding. "I hope we can settle our differences at this step in the talks," she added following the meeting.

Following fact-finding there are no formal steps to take, except to start talks over again or strike.

Larry Halter, spokesman for the WFC and Illinois Education Association (IEA) said, after the mediation step was unsuccessful that if talks can't be settled in fact-finding his group may have to call a strike.

'It's Scary... We Live In Constant Fear Of The Rain'

by Lynn Asinof
and Jill Bettner

A Wheeling man stood chest deep in the murky water that had flooded his basement this weekend. Pieces of wood and other debris floated around him as he worked to start pumping the water out.

"There's nothing you can do," he said with disgust, "especially after it happens a couple of times."

The man was only one of hundreds in the Wheeling-Butte area whose homes were damaged by the foul-smelling waters that flooded streets and houses this weekend. Most of the residents in this area have come to expect flooding whenever there is a heavy rain, but few have gotten used to the idea.

FOR EXAMPLE, Mrs. Calvin Lees of 4 Beechwood Court E., Buffalo Grove, has been flooded eight times in the past 2½ years. Mrs. Lees said that each time her basement took in 5 feet of water.

"The first time we were hit, we hadn't even moved upstairs yet," Mrs. Lees said. "I had a file of $4,000 to $5,000 in losses. Before I even got started I was wiped out. Everything we lost we still owned on. We're just coming down to the line now."

Mrs. Lees has gone to some trouble trying to keep her house from flooding. She bought railroad ties to put along the back of her house "in hopes of not losing any more yard." She also tried using sandbags along the driveway to keep water from coming into the house.

BUT IN THE END, the Lees resorted to gasoline-powered pumps to get the water from their house into White Pine Ditch. The pumps are also used by several neighbors in a community effort to keep homes dry.

"Everybody's so used to us getting hit that they all run over," Mrs. Lees said. "We have access to each other's houses. We understand what each other's problems are. As soon as everyone comes yome, it's jump in your shorts, grab your buckets and brooms and help."

"It's awfully scary," Mrs. Lees added. "We live in constant fear of rain. We have to make sure someone is home all the time."

Mrs. Mike Plesha of 151 S. Wolf Rd., Wheeling, was using three pumps this weekend. She said there were only a few inches of water over the basement floor and that a plunger in the utility room drain kept sewage water from backing up into her home.

"THIS WEEKEND, no matter what you had done, you would have got water," she said. "The water was seeping in from underground, so there was nothing you could do."

Mrs. Plesha said she moved into her home less than a year ago, and that no one had warned her about flooding before she bought the house.

Although the Pleshas only got a few inches of water in their basement this weekend, in June the whole basement was filled. They had to rip out the wood paneling and recaulk their walls to make the room livable again. To keep the dampness out of the basement, the Pleshas have also bought a dehumidifier.

The Pleshas, like many other homeowners, keep a scrap book of pictures of water in their basements. The pictures show water filled garages and reaching up to doorsteps.

WILLIAM OTT, of the same address, has some definite ideas about how to prevent the flooding. He thinks the village should deepen the Heritage Park retention basin to hold more water, and that a flood control gate should be put on the basin.

"But no one wants to listen to me," Ott said. "They don't believe that someone like me could have the answer."

Greg Graham, 149 S. Wolf Rd., Wheeling, has been living in his house for a year, and he said he's ready to sell because of the flooding. Once again, Graham said no one warned him of the flooding before he bought the house.

Mrs. Graham said it takes three days to clean up their house every time it floods. She said mud a half-inch thick covers the ground-level floors after each flood.

Along with the mud and water, the Grahams said they also find frogs in their basement after the floods. Spiders and other insects also plague the Grahams once the waters subside.

LIKE OTHER residents along Wolf Road, the Grahams have given up trying to keep any good furniture in their paneled basement. Whenever a heavy rain falls, they put all their ground-floor belongings above the water line.

Robert Rowland of 655 Thornwood Dr.,

Buffalo Grove, said he has easily spent $1,000 to put tile around his back yard at the suggestion of Arnold Seaberg, Buffalo Grove engineer. But Rowland said the tile has not helped keep the waters back.

He said the flood waters were up to his car doors when he left for work Friday night and that he had to drive across a neighbor's yard to get out of the area. Rowland added that this is a common occurrence. "It happens every time we have more than a normal rain," he said.

Rowland said he thinks the problems are caused because White Pine Ditch is too small to handle the amount of water which drains out of the area. He said the village should put in more sewers.

ALTHOUGH ROWLAND has been to several Buffalo Grove board meetings to ask for the sewers, he said he's getting the runaround. "They're listening to people with flooding problems, but that's all they're doing," Rowland said. "I keep spending money and working and spending and working, but I've had it."

Rowland added that flooding isn't confined to the warmer seasons. He said in winter slush backs up and the salt kills the trees and grass on his parkway.

Mrs. Jim Broskow of 258 Lincoln Terr., Buffalo Grove, said the stationary tub in her basement was nearly full of raw sewage. "We were just praying that the stationary tub wouldn't overflow, and fortunately it didn't," she said.

After the last rainfall, the Broskows extended the wells around their basement windows with aluminum lawn edging, but even that didn't keep the water out this weekend.

DURING THE JUNE flooding, the Broskows had so many broken windows from the pressure of the flood waters that they decided to open their windows this time. "We decided since the windows would probably break anyway, we might as well not have a bunch of broken glass besides the water," Mrs. Broskow said.

The Broskows also used some makeshift methods to prevent more serious flooding in their home. They stopped up a standpipe with an old baby bottle to keep the water from gushing out, and they stuffed a neighbor's standpipe with a rubber ball.

"I love rain," Mrs. Broskow said. "I've got tomato plants that need it, but this is ridiculous. About 10 drops is all I can stomach these days."

No Insurance For Flooding

by JILL BETTNER

Mrs. Calvin Lees is going shopping this week for a new clothes dryer — it will be the third she has bought in the past 2½ years because flood waters entered her basement, ruining the others.

Replacing appliances is getting to be expensive for Mrs. Lees, who lives at 4 Beechwood Ct. E. in Buffalo Grove, an area frequently inundated. Like other flood victims, Mrs. Lees must pay for all water damages out of her own pocket.

Currently, no flood insurance of any type is offered by private companies in Illinois. Local agents agree it isn't likely that it will be available in the future, either.

AT ONE TIME, Homeowners Allstate wrote a policy that covered water damage," said Mildred Wozniak at the information desk at the Illinois Department of Insurance in Chicago. "But," she said, "the policy made them responsible every time a toilet backed up or a sink overflowed besides rain damage, and they finally cut it off."

Local agent Norb Schmaus said even if private companies were to form a pool to offer some sort of flood insurance, based on past experience they would probably have to make the premiums so high that cost of the coverage would be prohibitive for most people.

"There was a certain amount of water damage coverage around 1964 under a form called 'additional extended coverage,'" Schmaus said, "but there were tremendous flooding problems in Chicago that year and several companies were completely wiped out. The premiums just didn't cover the damages."

"IT'S NOT A GOOD situation," but companies just won't take it anymore," Mrs. Wozniak said. "I live in a flood prone area myself and I've contacted 15 companies and none of them have it. So, I'm left holding the bag."

Mrs. Wozniak said she had been advised to channel any calls regarding flood insurance to the Federal Insurance Administration, a division of the federal Housing and Urban Development (HUD) in Springfield. That office can tell a citizen if he lives in a community that qualifies for federal flood insurance — about the only relief available.

Buffalo Grove is among several Northwest communities looking into the HUD program. The village board passed a resolution July 24 to submit an application to HUD to be allowed to participate. Arlington Heights and Palatine have already applied and have been approved for the federal flood protection subsidies.

UNDER THE HUD PLAN, residents of a city or village that has been approved, can buy flood insurance through their local insurance agents. State Farm Insurance Co. is designated to underwrite the policies in Illinois.

Coverage is available for existing residences and small business establishments.

Single-family homeowners can insure their houses for up to $17,500 and the contents to $5,000 to cover flood damages. Rates range from 40 to 60 cents per $100 coverage.

Part of the requirements for approval to participate in the HUD program is that the municipality agree to adopt land use and control measures that will reduce future flood threats.

DAVE PHILLIPS, recreation director of the Wheeling Park District, chats with Mrs. Crisanne Rymyer about programs for the park district. Phillips is going from house to house throughout Wheeling to find out what residents would like the park district to offer in the way of programs. Programs for the fall will be open for registration Sept. 1.

Rummage Sale Slated

A benefit antique and rummage sale for the Federal Prisoners' Christmas Fund will be in Wheeling during the Labor Day weekend.

Sponsored by Spare Things, a cooperative exchange at 981 N. Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling, the sale will run from Friday through Monday and will feature a display of prison art.

Donations for the sale will be accepted through Thursday at Spare Things.

Await Disaster Relief Declaration

Federal officials yesterday were awaiting a declaration of inundated lands around the Salt Creek as a disaster area, an action which would mean full recovery of damages for hundreds of homeowners and low-interest loans for others.

Passage just two weeks ago of new legislation concerning disaster relief would mean that homeowners who suffered less than $5,000 damages would recover the full amount. Those who suffered more than that would be eligible for one per cent loans up to $50,000 for damages to real estate and $10,000 to personal property. Each loan would include a $5,000 "forgiveness."

U.S. Rep. Roman Pucinski, D-11th, explained the terms of the new legislation, and estimated after inspecting the afflicted area that a substantial number of the homeowners affected had losses of less than $5,000. If they substantiated their claims, their loans would simply be marked "PAID."

Estimates of damages in Cook County ranged up to $25 million to some 1,850 homes and 100 businesses. In DuPage County, an estimated 3,000 homes suffered up to $5 million damages.

In order to qualify property owners for the federal aid, either the Small Business Administration or President Nixon must declare the area as a "disaster."

BOTH PUCINSKI and Republican Sen. Charles H. Percy have asked the White House for the disaster declaration. After touring the area by rowboat Sunday, Percy declared that in some cases, damage was as bad as those in the recent Pennsylvania floods.

Pucinski said there was "no question in my mind" that the declaration would be made.

He urged local officials to wire the White House asking for federal aid. He also advised homeowners and businessmen to obtain pictures, "preferably color pictures" of the damages in order to be able later to substantiate their claims.

Mayor Robert Teichert of Mount Prospect also said yesterday that he will ask the Department of Local Government Affairs to inspect the damage and to determine whether any state aid is available to victims of the flooding.

A spokesman for the Small Business Administration in Chicago said that field offices would be established as soon as possible if disaster aid is approved, and information on applications for funds would be distributed.

Vehicle Tax In County Is Outlawed

Residents of unincorporated Cook County were victorious in their fight against the newly enacted county motor vehicle tax yesterday when the tax was ruled unconstitutional in Cook County Circuit Court.

Judge Raymond S. Sarnow said the tax on residents and businesses in unincorporated areas did not provide any additional services for those taxed and was "constitutionally offensive."

The tax, vehicle stickers, imposes a yearly charge of $10 to $15 per car and graduated rates for trucks. Sarnow said the county tax ordinance failed to meet the requirements of the home rule provision of the 1970 Illinois Constitution, which allows large municipalities to levy taxes for special purposes.

The county ordinance is silent as to the special services gained from the tax and is absent of any indication that the money raised would be used to pay for special services, Sarnow said.

IN A HEATED discussion between attorneys outside the courtroom, States Attorney Paul Biebel promised an appeal of the decision. He said the decision was not made on the issues, only on his motion to dismiss the suit. Biebel had asked that the suit, filed by the Prospect Heights Improvement Association (PHIA) and the Cook County School Bus Company of unincorporated Elk Grove Township, be dismissed, on the grounds that the tax was constitutional.

"I don't feel it is over," Biebel said. "No affidavits have been filed, and the facts of the case are not being considered."

Edward Berman, attorney for PHIA and the school bus company, said, "If the tax is unconstitutional, there is nothing that could be pleaded to change the constitutionality."

"If it (the tax) is unconstitutional, it doesn't merit filing an answer," Berman told Biebel.

Jack Gilligan, chairman of the PHIA committee fighting the tax, said he was optimistic that the ruling would be in PHIA's favor. "I'm happy about the outcome," he said. "We had a good case, and the issues were reasonably clear."

Gilligan warned, however, that residents should not remove the stickers from their cars until the appeal is over. He also advised that residents who have not yet purchased the stickers to do so.

BERMAN SAID he and Attorney Donald Kreger would draw up a written order based on today's verbal ruling tomorrow for Judge Sarnow to sign. The judge made no decision on what to do with the vehicle funds collected in taxes earlier this year. The money is now being held in escrow and had been earmarked for the Cook County Sheriff's Department by Cook County Pres. George W. Dunne.

THE ANTICIPATED annual revenue hearings. Biebel pointed out that 90 per cent of the Sheriff's department budget goes to protect 191,000 persons in unincorporated Cook County.

The PHIA filed the suit on behalf of all residents in unincorporated Cook County. Homeowners groups in the area contributed to raise funds for the legal fight.

Muir site. The basin would help alleviate flooding at the Pleasant Run apartment development. School board members do not want the basin on school property because they feel it would be a danger to children.

The new agreement with the park district would govern the park district's use of school facilities for its programs.

School Board To Discuss New Pact, Flooding

The Prospect Heights Dist. 23 school board will hold a special meeting tomorrow to discuss possible future flooding at John Muir School and a pending new agreement with the Prospect Heights Park District.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the district administrative offices, 700 N. Schoenbeck Rd.

Supt. Edward Grodzky said the board would discuss means to prevent the possibility of future flooding at the school. Currently the site, at Drake Terrace and Oak Avenue, includes a detention basin, but officials fear the basin may not be adequate to prevent heavy flooding.

Dist. 23 officials have refused to grant easements to let Wheeling build a retention basin and two sewer lines on the

4 Buffalo Grove High Boundary Plans Proposed

Four alternative proposals for boundaries for Buffalo Grove High School were to be presented last night to the High School Dist. 214 board of education.

The four alternatives were to be presented by a committee of district administrators and residents of Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights.

The proposals place varying parts of Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights in the attendance area for the new high school when it opens in September, 1973.

The board of education has said it will decide on final boundaries for the new high school by December of this year. Public hearings on the proposals are expected to be scheduled before the final boundaries are adopted.

ALONG WITH THE alternate boundary plans, the committee has drawn up enrollment projections through the 1976-77 school year for Buffalo Grove, Wheeling and Hersey high schools.

All four proposals involve shifting students from the present Wheeling and Hersey attendance areas to Buffalo Grove.

In all of the alternatives, Buffalo Grove would have a senior class in its first year of operation and students who will be seniors in 1973-74 would graduate from the schools they now are attending.

The four alternatives are:

1. All students now in Cooper Junior High School in Buffalo Grove and those living north of Palatine Road and attending Rand Junior High in Arlington Heights would attend Buffalo Grove High.

2. The same as Alternative One with the addition of students from the Dun-Lo Highlands and Buffalo Highlands in unincorporated Wheeling Township and of Cambridge subdivision in Buffalo Grove.

3. The same boundaries as Alternative One, except students in the Ivy Hill Elementary School area in Arlington Heights would continue to attend Hersey instead of going to Buffalo Grove.

4. Same boundaries as Alternative Two, except with Ivy Hill area attending Hersey as in Alternative Three.

IN ADDITION TO the four alternatives for the Buffalo Grove boundaries, the committee offered the board two proposals to adjust boundaries in the eastern portion of the Hersey High School attendance area to cut down the number of students attending Hersey.

In one proposal, students south of Kensington Road in Mount Prospect would be transferred to Prospect High School. In the other, students from Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 south of Palatine Road in Prospect Heights would be moved from Hersey to Wheeling.

Either of the proposals for the Hersey boundaries could be used in combination with any of the alternatives for the Buffalo Grove boundaries.

Emmerich Park Improvement Plan Weighed

Preliminary plans for improvement of Emmerich Park and the park building were discussed Thursday night by the park board.

The project, which includes lighted tennis courts, two baseball diamonds, a lighted hockey rink and an open skating rink, has been estimated at $127,000, although park commissioners hope to reduce the cost somewhat.

The plans also call for remodeling inside the park building.

Commissioners also learned that work has begun on the comprehensive plans for the park site adjacent to Joyce Kilmer School on Golfview Terrace. Work there was delayed this year by bad weather.

SEN. ADLAI STEVENSON III was one of the guest speakers Monday when George Lauritzen, owner of Lauritzen and Co., 1197 Willis Ave., Wheeling, received the presidential "E" award for excellence in exporting. The firm produces wholesale bakery ingredients that are exported to more than 15 nations.

The events will be supervised by the Regina Council of the Knights of Columbus.

Fact-Finding Next Step In School Pay Talks

Fact-finding will be the next step in Dist. 21 salary negotiations. The board of education approved the move Thursday night in reply to a written request from the Wheeling Faculty Council (WFC). The board approved the move at its regular meeting without going into executive session.

It also approved the recommendation of a special tax sheltered annuities committee to allow four new insurance companies to join four existing companies soliciting within the district. The companies were chosen after meeting eight requirements set down by the district.

Finally, the board approved the purchase of property for its 19th school site. The site is located off Jackson Drive near the Booth Tarkington and Carl Sandburg schools in Wheeling.

Board members also tabled one item — selecting a monitoring system for the entire district — and introduced a new policy that will be voted upon at the next meeting in two weeks.

Supt. Ken Gill explained to the board the policy was not introduced solely because the contract has not been settled in the district. He said the district's attorneys, reviewing district policies, felt a strike procedure is necessary in case a strike should ever be called in the future.

In the meantime, the teachers and board are slated to go to fact-finding as soon as a fact-finder can be found. That can be anywhere from two weeks to two months, according to officials.

One board member said Thursday night it looks like the talks won't end until at least early November.

MARGO RICHTER, chairman of the

WFC said she was glad the board decided to go to fact-finding. "I hope we can settle our differences at this step in the talks," she added following the meeting.

Following fact-finding there are no formal steps to take, except to start talks over again or strike.

Larry Halter, spokesman for the WFC and Illinois Education Association (IEA) said, after the mediation step was unsuccessful that if talks can't be settled in fact-finding his group may have to call a strike.

Two of State's Attorney Edward V. Hanrahan's assistants asked the U.S. District Court to enjoin Hanrahan from coercing employees to contribute money or other assistance to his reelection campaign.

The World

Finland has suggested to the United States and other governments that a preparatory meeting for the Soviet-backed Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe should begin Nov. 22 in Helsinki.

Prince William of Gloucester, Queen Elizabeth's cousin and ninth in line of succession to the British throne, died in a fiery plane crash during an air race.

The Decolonization Committee of the United Nations declared that Puerto Rico should be independent. The move, instigated by Cuba, was not binding and was simply an action to embarrass the United States.

Tropical storm Cora bore down on North Vietnam's Red River Delta rice bowl, threatening costly floods in the area where Communists say Americans deliberately have been bombing the country's elaborate dike system.

Pentagon sources said a Chinese minesweeper has entered Haiphong harbor for the first time since U.S. mines were laid around that seaport and six others last May to cut the flow of military supplies into North Vietnam.

Federal Officials Await Disaster Declaration

Federal officials yesterday were awaiting a declaration of inundated lands around the Salt Creek as a disaster area, an action which would mean full recovery of damages for hundreds of homeowners and low-interest loans for others.

Passage just two weeks ago of new legislation concerning disaster relief would mean that homeowners who suffered less than $5,000 damages would recover the full amount. Those who suffered more than that would be eligible for one per cent loans up to $50,000 for damages to real estate and $10,000 to personal property. Each loan would include a $5,000 "forgiveness."

U.S. Rep. Roman Pucinski, D-11th, explained the terms of the new legislation, and estimated after inspecting the afflicted area that a substantial number of the homeowners affected had losses of less than $5,000. If they substantiated their claims, their loans would simply be marked "PAID."

Estimates of damages in Cook County ranged up to $2.5 million to some 1,850 homes and 100 businesses. In DuPage County, an estimated 3,000 homes suffered up to $5 million damages.

In order to qualify property owners for the federal aid, either the Small Business Administration or President Nixon must declare the area as a "disaster."

BOTH PUCINSKI and Republican Sen. Charles H. Percy have asked the White House for the disaster declaration. After touring the area by rowboat Sunday, Percy declared that in some cases, damage was as bad as those in the recent Pennsylvania floods.

Pucinski said there was "no question in my mind" that the declaration would be made.

He urged local officials to wire the White House asking for federal aid. He also advised homeowners and businessmen to obtain pictures, "preferably color pictures" of the damages in order to be able later to substantiate their claims.

Mayor Robert Teichert of Mount Prospect also said yesterday that he will ask the Department of Local Government Affairs to inspect the damage and to determine whether any state aid is available to victims of the flooding.

A spokesman for the Small Business Administration in Chicago said that field offices would be established as soon as possible if disaster aid is approved, and information on applications for funds would be distributed.

Residents Deluge Trustees With Flood Complaints

More than two dozen homeowners brought their complaints about flooded basements directly to the Palatine Village Board last night and urged the board to "do something instead of talking and giving sympathy."

The board responded that the village already has taken some steps to alleviate flooding, particularly in the Winston Park subdivision, and that ongoing studies are being made to determine other possible solutions.

Mayor Jack Moodie warned that any large-scale solution to the widespread flooding problem would be costly. "You're not going to get something for nothing," he said.

Trustee Clayton W. Brown announced that the Sept. 9 "Listening Post" conducted by the trustees would be devoted to the flooding question.

Members of the trustees' planning and public works committee, which Brown heads, will be at village hall between 9:30 a.m. and noon that day to hear residents' comments.

THE BOARD did not act on a suggestion by Trustee Shirley A. Munson that a special commission be set up specifically to analyze the flooding problem.

The board also did not act on a proposal by Trustee Fred H. Zajonc that the village's Civil Defense siren alert residents when a storm is particularly severe, in order to take precautionary steps.

Michael W. Lindstrom, president of the Winston Park Homeowners Association, cited numerous dates on which flooding was reported in the subdivision and urged the trustees to do what they could to alleviate the problem.

Brown reminded Lindstrom of steps already taken by the board, including arranging for a third pump to be installed in the Winston Park lift station, and for a sanitary sewer line to be extended into the subdivision.

Moodie said the main obstacle that has to be overcome is storm water going down recessed driveways and into basements, causing flooding there and at the same time entering the sanitary sewers and triggering sewage backups into other homes.

THE THUNDER OF thoroughbreds at Arlington Park Race Track ended Monday for the 1972 season. But the thunder of irate track fans was almost as loud as the hoofs on the track Monday. They say that the track isn't what it used to be, commenting there is as much dirt in the stands as on the track. Most confessed that they will be back next year, however.

Fans Say It's Not What It Used To Be

That's All For This Year—Track Is Closed

by DAVE MAHSMAN

Well, that's all for this year. Hope it's better next year.

Arlington Park Race Track closed its 45th season of thoroughbred racing yesterday, and the consensus of track fans is that the park "just ain't what it used to be."

"It's been a lousy meet, and they have lousy races and lousy jockeys. The whole place is a mess inside and outside," observed Ferdinand Weidner, Palatine, who said he goes to the races about once a week during the season.

Weidner pointed to the worn carpeting in the grandstand, betting tickets scattered over it like so much confetti.

"This used to be a beautiful track," Weidner said. "But now it's nothing but dust and dirt. If you want to throw your tickets into a trash barrel, you can't find one."

WEIDNER HAD gripes other than the cleanliness of the track and stands as well. He doesn't like the parking conditions for one thing. He said if he comes late, he can't find a place to park. And if he wants to leave early, he's blocked in by other cars.

And if he's thirsty, Weidner claims water is virtually unavailable. Sure, there are water fountains, "but they don't work. What water comes out of them is full of rust."

As an example of how the track has deteriorated, Weidner shoved his program over for inspection. He said he hasn't seen a full card all season, and the last day was no exception.

With all these complaints, will Weidner be back next season?

"PROBABLY," he says. "If you win, I guess you can overlook (the problems)."

Other patrons at season's end saw things much as Weidner did.

"I come to the track every day, and I can definitely see that the place has been going downhill — and the horses ain't too much either," complained Bill Goers, a retired man from Chicago.

Charge Area Man In Hit-And-Run

A Palatine man has been charged with reckless homicide and leaving the scene of a fatal accident in connection with a hit-and-run incident on Palatine Road the night of Aug. 9.

Jack Eugene Cook, 52, of 1459 Joan Dr., Palatine, told Arlington Heights police yesterday he was driving in the area and may have hit something the night that 19-year-old Mary Gabl was struck and killed by a car as she was walking home from a friend's house.

Police said yesterday they had not yet checked Cook's car to see if it could have been involved in the case.

He was released on $2,500 bond with a court date set for Sept. 22.

School Board 'Reassesses' Pact Stand

Members of the High School Dist. 211 board of education's negotiating team are "reassessing our entire position" in contract talks with the district's teachers because of support the teachers gave their bargaining unit last week.

At a one-hour meeting last night between board team and officials of the Dist. 211 Education Association, the teachers bargaining group, board spokesman Robert Seger congratulated the association on the support it received from the teachers last Tuesday.

"As a result of your meeting," Seger said, "we are right now in the process of reassessing where we stand, what our priorities are and what sort of agreement we can reach with you."

Following the brief meeting, the two sides agreed to hold their next meeting on Tuesday, Sept. 5 and set tentative meetings for later that same week.

Seger explained that his team could not meet with the teachers later this week because it will not be able to get together to discuss its position until the weekend when the board president returns from the West Coast.

"I don't know what our position will be after we reevaluate," Seger said. "I'm afraid I'm going to have to ask you for some patience. Our reaction to your meeting was that we've got to reevaluate everything we've done because we're on a collision course and we don't want a collision."

THE BOARD and association have been negotiating for nearly six months on a 1972-73 teachers contract. The two sides have been deadlocked on the issue of whether or not to include guarantees on "working conditions" such as class size, evaluation procedures and teacher workloads in the contract.

Last Tuesday 235 of the 380 association members in the district supported their negotiating team's demand that guarantees on those items be placed in the contract. The board has in the past refused to place guarantees in the contract and has instead offered to set up committees to study any problems in the area of working conditions.

Seger also told the teachers last night the board is considering hiring Richard Zwieback, a professional negotiator, as a consultant in the contract talks.

Zwieback, co-counsel for the Illinois Association of School Boards, has worked with Palatine Twp. Dist. 15, River Trails Dist. 26 and Mount Prospect Dist. 57 in their negotiations, as well as with other districts around the state.

Len Fioca, head of the association negotiations team, told Seger some teachers are upset because the board is considering employing Zwieback. "Some of the places he's been there have been problems with the board working with teachers," Fioca said.

Sick As A 'Dog'? Veterinarian Will Ring Your Bell

by MARCIA KRAMER

Lee Bell figures he's been bitten badly about three or four times in his 29 years. He's also been licked a few times, for better or for worse.

And he tries not to think about the number of times he's been, as he puts it, "piddled on."

It's all part of the job, he shrugs. And in spite of it all, he doesn't regret for a minute having picked that job.

Lee Bell is a veterinarian. A traveling vet, at that.

He'll help to deliver five kittens in Schaumburg, patch up the loser of a dog fight in Elk Grove Village and examine some guinea pigs in Arlington Heights. It's all in the course of a day's work.

Dr. Bell's practice consists almost entirely of house calls. He considers it a temporary measure, to build up a clientele before setting up his own clinic in unincorporated Palatine Township.

And if those arrangements fall through: "I'm seriously thinking about buying a camper and setting up a mobile veterinary hospital. I could do surgery right in the driveway."

DR. BELL had been associated with an Arlington Heights animal hospital for three years, but his work with animals goes back further than that.

At age 14, he assisted a local veterinarian in Muskegon, Iowa, with a "mixed animal practice," which involves treating both house pets and farm animals — sheep, pigs, chickens, goats, horses, cats, dogs — you name it, I did it," Dr. Bell says.

When he started out on his own, however, in 1967, he decided to specialize in what he calls the "less exotic" animals.

The decision was made partly because he couldn't keep up with the various new diseases afflicting farm animals. It was also because he couldn't accept the harsh fact that farm animals are thought of in purely economic terms — "if you couldn't treat the animal for less than 10 per cent of its market value, you would kill it."

In practicality, Dr. Bell's professional experience has not been limited to cats and dogs. He's also treated fish, parakeets, hamsters and guinea pigs, not to mention a skunk (a "stinky experience," even though the animal was de-scented), a wild pheasant and a 60-pound python.

DR. BELL ADMITS he's a sucker for any animal in need of medical attention. Like the time a man found a small rabbit covered with mud in his backyard this summer after a heavy storm. Dr. Bell took the rabbit into his own home in Palatine, where he and his wife, Anne, spent many hours bottle-feeding the animal.

They eventually set the rabbit free in their backyard, and Dr. Bell says ruefully, "The little monster promptly destroyed my entire garden."

It's not always the animals who need help. Sometimes it's their owners.

"I don't profess to be an animal psychiatrist," Dr. Bell says, "but once in a while you get a situation where you have to counsel the family."

A common situation is when a young couple has a baby and diverts their attention from their pet to the child: "Animals go through a resentment period just like some people," Dr. Bell said.

In general, he contends, animals' behavior reflects the personality of the household in which they live: "You show me a nervous, high strung, barking dog and I'll show you a high tension household."

SOMETIMES, a veterinarian runs into a case of "pet abuse." One woman kept bringing in her cat, once with a broken leg, another time with a concussion. "It turned out there were marital problems and the husband was taking it out on the cat," Dr. Bell said. He kept the cat at his own home until the differences were settled.

The cat no doubt felt right at home. Dr. Bell's house abounds with four-legged creatures. Some are there only temporarily as relatives and friends vacation. Others are strays between homes. A couple, along with a bunch of tropical fish and puppies, live there.

Lee Bell surveys his living room, ruggles, temporarily, because Melancholy Baby, Chee Chee and Yasue just got over the flu. "You have to be a nut, I guess," he says finally, "but we like them."

That's It For A Year — Track's Closed

going downhill," added Larry Morley, another retired man who visits Arlington Park daily. Morley is from Rockford, but meets Goers at the track to sit in their favorite spot inside the clubhouse, watching the races on closed-circuit television.

As with Weidner, Goers and Morley complained most about the cleanliness of the track and grandstand. Goers commented that at tracks in Florida, "you can eat off the floor in the men's room, that's how clean they are." But such is not the case at Arlington Park, they sighed. Not anymore.

OTHER TRACK fans, not as ready to reveal their names as were the retired men, ("My wife would kill me if she knew I was here," said one) were just as quick to point out faults of the track. The complaints most voiced were that Will Raising Walks Combat Flooding?

An engineer contracted by the Village of Palatine maintains that raising the level of sidewalks in Winston Park may be the only practical way to combat the flooding of homes in that subdivision with recessed driveways.

Walter Hodel, of Consoer, Townsend and Associates, Chicago, conceded that raising the sidewalks and at the same time, further steepening the slant of the recessed driveways, would be an expensive venture, though he could not estimate the cost.

He indicated, however, that it is the only proposition being seriously considered at this time.

Hodel was asked on Aug. 2 by Village Mgr. Berton G. Braun to study the feasibility of raising the sidewalks and to propose any other possible solutions to the flooding problem.

SEVERAL DOZEN homes in Winston Park have recessed driveways, which were banned from further developments

Village Endorses Flooding Plan

The Village of Palatine last night added its official endorsement of a vast long-range program designed to alleviate flooding problems in the village.

Mayor Jack Moodie signed the Upper Salt Creek Watershed Plan, the multi-million dollar project which several Northwest suburbs hope will minimize the flooding of the creek.

Backers of the watershed plan expect to obtain the rest of the signatures of sponsors this week, and to send the plan to Washington for federal funding.

The plan involves an elaborate combination of water retention basins, reinforcement of the creek's banks and other means to prevent the creek from flooding.

If the plan is fully funded, it will take nine years for full implementation, including the development of recreational facilities at the various retention basins.

in Palatine after 1965.

Four of the homes, at 1037, 1043, 1047 and 1055 E. Williams Dr., have been specifically studied by Hodel, who expects to complete his report to the village in two to three weeks.

He cautioned that even raising the level of the sidewalks — in effect, building a barrier to block storm water from flowing down the driveways and into the basements — would not be a clear-cut, totally efficient tactic.

"It's difficult to say whether it would help all the (recessed) driveways," Hodel said. "Every situation is different. It might do the trick in one situation and not in another."

Likewise, he indicated, no single method would be "100 per cent safe and economical."

"THERE IS no storm water disposal system that would keep us high and dry in each case," Hodel said.

Raising the level of the sidewalks in Winston Park would mean the streets in the subdivision would be flooded during heavy storms, but Hodel said that's better than having the water in the basements.

He said an interim measure that homeowners could practice is to pile sandbags at the top of their driveways. This method provides "the same solution as raising the sidewalks, but on a smaller scale," he said.

Another possible solution mentioned half-seriously by village trustees following a heavy storm last month involves filling in the driveways, in effect sealing off the garages.

Another possible long range solution to flooding problems throughout the village involves separating the storm and sanitary sewers in some parts of town where they are now combined. This would cost an estimated $7½ million to $8 million.

Jaycees Clean Up Cemetery Damage

The toppled gravestones in the Greeley Street cemetery in Palatine are now erect.

Four Palatine Jaycees staged a clean-up in the cemetery Saturday, and engaged a Dundee firm to patch up the broken grave markers.

Because of Friday night's storm, the Jaycees have scheduled another cleanup for Oct. 14 to mow the lawn and trim the weeds in the cemetery. The cemetery is owned by the Immanuel Lutheran Church of Palatine.

Liability Leases, Hurdles For Bike Trail

Leases and liability are still minor hurdles to dividing up parts of the Commonwealth Edison right-of-way intended for Palatine Park District's proposed bicycle trail.

A lease for the 185-foot swath through Palatine has been in the works for nearly two years. Now it's in the hands of the utility company while minor changes are being made in related leases.

Once the lease is returned to the park district, residents bordering the right-of-way may get a license to extend their backyards for 50 feet on either side of the leased area.

The catch is — each resident requesting a license must produce a certificate of insurance coverage amounting to $300,000 personal injury and $500,000 per incident for the licensed area.

PARK DISTRICT Dir. Fred P. Hall is checking out a possibility of getting an insurance company to write one policy for all residents with the 50-foot land license. Unless that effort succeeds, homeowners will have to add the liability coverage to their current policies through their individual companies. And the $300,000-$500,000 coverage only partially covers possible injuries on the sections of land.

Residents' liability applies only to themselves or their guests who might be injured on the right-of-way, according to Park District Atty. Roger Bjorvik.

Bicyclists, hikers, or others injured in park-related activities on the property would be covered by the park district's insurance, Bjorvik said.

Previously-leased areas in northwest Palatine are causing the current holdup in the park district's lease. Part of the bicycle route runs through land presently being farmed by residents who have private leases with the utility company. Their leases are being rewritten to allow a 20-foot wide trail through the property.

The area involved is north of St. Joseph's Home, west to the Palatine Hills Golf Course.

RESIDENTS ANXIOUS to obtain part of the right-of-way have been working toward some sort of lease arrangement with Commonwealth Edison for over two years. Initially, they were willing to grade and landscape the area at their own expense if they could get the go-ahead from the utility company. When the park district's progress became sluggish toward getting leases, some residents turned to Commonwealth Edison for individual leases, but were turned down.

Now, only minor hurdles block a resident-park district coalition for the right-of-way. The lease from Commonwealth Edison may be returned sometime this week. After that, the complications with insurance arrangements are the only obstacles to license agreements with residents.

500 Residents Of Three Fountains Remain Homeless

by KEN KOZAK

About 500 people evacuated from the Three Fountains apartment complex over the weekend remain homeless today as work crews continue the massive job of cleaning out a flooded underground parking lot and repairing damaged power equipment in the wake of Friday night's devastating rainstorm.

The water that filled the underground parking lot to a depth of 15 feet stranding 34 cars Friday had been almost completely pumped out yesterday afternoon after three days of nearly round-the-clock work by paid and volunteer crews.

Electrical power equipment for three of the four evacuated buildings was housed in the underground area and was inoperable and extensively damaged. Mrs. Wilma A. Butsch, apartment manager for the three buildings, known as Three Fountains Phase I, said Rolling Meadows Civil Defense Deputy Director Carmen Vineziano estimated the water damage at $500,000.

Water supply to all four evacuated buildings has been cut off while City Sanitarian Donald Schindler awaits test results on water samples taken there yesterday. Schindler expects results of the tests today from Northwest Community Hospital, analyzing the samples for bacteria content. He said the tests are a precautionary measure.

THREE FOUNTAINS was hit hardest of any spot in the city, but other areas also had extensive flooding and damage. City Mgr. James Watson said he didn't recall any storm in Rolling Meadows causing as much damage as this one.

City public works crews were out Friday night and all day Saturday pumping out basements in 36 residences around the city. Watson estimated basement flooding caused about $75,000 worth of damage. The city crews were still principally occupied with flood-related problems yesterday, Watson said.

During the storm the city lost automatic control of its water well system, and had to go to a manual control system.

"All of the automatic controls on our water system went out," Watson said. "I don't know if water got in (to the electrical system) or not." He said he didn't know when the damage would be repaired but it will not affect water supplies to consumers.

Mrs. Karen Stanley, director of the Northwest Opportunity Center, said cen-

Cars Look Like They've Been On Ocean Bottom

by TONI GINNETTI

John King sipped a can of beer and smiled as he examined the interior of his mud-covered, water-soaked Toyota.

"No sense in letting something like this get you down," he laughed as he unscrewed the front bucket seats.

King, a district sales manager for the Toro Lawn Co., had just salvaged his auto from the flooded lower level of "B" building at the Three Fountains phase one apartment complex. His was one of 34 cars submerged in more than 20 feet of water caused by Friday night's heavy rains.

King's car was typical of what Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis Case had described as cars looking like "they had been at the bottom of the ocean."

"ACTUALLY, IT'S kind of interesting to see," King observed as he stared at the dried mud packed on the car's roof, hood and windows.

"The car is worth about $800. My insurance may cover it for about $100," he said.

Near King's car had been a $12,000 Cadillac, equipped with a telephone, and an odometer reading of 4 miles.

Like others whose cars had been parked in the lower level, King said he never expected the flood.

"I never thought it would go that far. I thought it would go a little way and that would be it," he said.

KING SAID his company car had also been parked in the lower level Friday night before the rain hit.

"I got that car out at about 8 p.m.," he said, "but when I went back to get this one, the water was already too deep to do anything."

Another woman agreed, saying she had driven her car into a "trickle" of water, only to return half an hour later to find the water level up to the car door handles.

As he attempted to bail out the puddles of water on the floor of his car, King calmly explained that he planned to take his car apart and steam clean it.

"Most people are trying to start the cars and that's wrong," he said. "I'll try to fix it up and sell it."

THE THUNDER OF thoroughbreds at Arlington as loud as the hoofs on the track Monday. They Park Race Track closed Monday for the 1972 season say that the track isn't what it used to be, common. But the thunder of irate track fans was almost mentioning there is as much dirt in the stands as on the track. Most confessed that they will be back next year, however.

Fans Say It's Not What It Used To Be

That's All For This Year—Track Is Closed

by DAVE MAHSMAN

Well, that's all for this year. Hope it's better next year.

Arlington Park Race Track closed its 45th season of thoroughbred racing yesterday, and the consensus of track fans is that the park "just ain't what it used to be."

Weidner pointed to the worn carpeting in the grandstand, betting tickets scattered over it like so much confetti.

"This used to be a beautiful track," Weidner said. "But now it's nothing but dust and dirt. If you want to throw your tickets into a trash barrel, you can't find one."

WEIDNER HAD gripes other than the cleanliness of the track and stands as well. He doesn't like the parking conditions for one thing. He said if he comes late, he can't find a place to park. And if he wants to leave early, he's blocked in by other cars.

And if he's thirsty, Weidner claims water is virtually unavailable. Sure, there are water fountains, "but they don't work. What water comes out of them is full of rust."

As an example of how the track has deteriorated, Weidner shoved his program over for inspection. He said he hasn't seen a full card all season, and the last day was no exception.

With all these complaints, will Weidner be back next season?

"PROBABLY," he says. "If you win, I guess you can overlook (the problems)."

Other patrons at season's end saw things much as Weidner did.

"I come to the track every day, and I can definitely see that the place has been going downhill — and the horses ain't too much either," complained Bill Goers, a retired man from Chicago.

Moodie Supports LWV Effort To End Palatine Township

Palatine Mayor Jack Moodie has endorsed the Palatine League of Women Voters' effort to dissolve Palatine Township government.

Moodie said last week he is "absolutely against" the continuation of the township level of government.

"I can see where it would be useful for the people who live in unincorporated areas," he said, "but the people in the village have a bad deal."

About 77 per cent of the township residents live in the municipalities of Palatine, Rolling Meadows and Inverness.

While township services are available to all residents of the township, most village residents use the services of their village. All residents of the township pay the same amount in taxes to support the township government.

The League of Women Voters is seeking to abolish the township because it considers it an outdated and unnecessary level of government.

The question will be on the Nov. 7 general election ballot.

The league's stand was endorsed this week by the Rolling Meadows City Council, 5 to 4. The Palatine Village Board is not expected to vote on the issue.

Her 'Nutrition' Shopping Spree Nearly Ended

Friday's rain nearly wiped out the efforts of an Arlington Heights woman to help families in the area on the Operation Nutrition program.

After reading an article in the Herald on the plight of more than 300 families in the Northwest suburban area who would not receive supplemental food from Operation Nutrition because funds for the program are being withheld, the Arlington Heights woman went on a massive grocery shopping spree. She purchased more than $1,300 of food for distribution to the families.

The food was delivered to the Northwest Opportunity Center for distribution on Friday.

The Nation

President Nixon announced that the draft will end in July and the nation's armed forces will be comprised solely of volunteers.

Sen. George S. McGovern said he would welcome a General Accounting Office (GAO) investigation of his campaign finances because "we want the American people to know where our money comes from."

Mark Spitz of Carmichael, Cal., won the first gold medal for the United States in the 20th Olympics by capturing the 200-meter butterfly in the world record time of 2:00.7.

Democrats are calling for an independent investigation of the alleged bugging of the party's national committee offices.

Postmaster General E. T. Klassen said savings made primarily from a 33,000-staff reduction have removed the need to ask for a $450 million postal rate increase.

The State

Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie, traveling in a camper bus without escort, launched a 2½-week campaign tour of the state, and left the bus to do some face-to-face campaigning on foot.

Members of Chicago's largest street gang demonstrated in the courtroom where the city's chief prosecutor and 13 others are on trial in the Chicago Black Panther case.

Two of State's Attorney Edward V. Hanrahan's assistants asked the U.S. District Court to enjoin Hanrahan from coercing employees to contribute money or other assistance to his reelection campaign.

The World

Finland has suggested to the United States and other governments that a preparatory meeting for the Soviet-backed Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe should begin Nov. 22 in Helsinki.

Prince William of Gloucester, Queen Elizabeth's cousin and ninth in line of succession to the British throne, died in a fiery plane crash during an air race.

The Decolonization Committee of the United Nations declared that Puerto Rico should be independent. The move, instigated by Cuba, was not binding and was simply an action to embarrass the United States.

The War

Tropical storm Cora bore down on North Vietnam's Red River Delta rice bowl, threatening costly floods in the area where Communists say Americans deliberately have been bombing the country's elaborate dike system.

Pentagon sources said a Chinese minesweeper has entered Haiphong harbor for the first time since U.S. mines were laid around that seaport and six others last May to cut the flow of military supplies into North Vietnam.

Sick As A 'Dog'? Veterinarian Will Ring Your Bell

by MARCIA KRAMER

Lee Bell figures he's been bitten badly about three or four times in his 29 years. He's also been kicked a few times, for better or for worse.

And he tries not to think about the number of times he's been, as he puts it, "pridled on."

It's all part of the job, he shrugs. And in spite of it all, he doesn't regret for a minute having picked that job.

Lee Bell is a veterinarian. A traveling vet. at that.

He'll help to deliver five kittens in Schaumburg, patch up the loser of a dog fight in Elk Grove Village and examine some guinea pigs in Arlington Heights. It's all in the course of a day's work.

Dr. Bell's practice consists almost entirely of house calls. He considers it a temporary measure, to build up a clientele before setting up his own clinic in unincorporated Palatine Township.

And if those arrangements fall through: "I'm seriously thinking about buying a camper and setting up a mobile veterinary hospital. I could do surgery right in the driveway."

DR. BELL had been associated with an Arlington Heights animal hospital for three years, but his work with animals goes back further than that.

At age 14, he assisted a local veterinarian in Muskegon, Iowa, with a "mixed animal practice," which involves treating both house pets and farm animals. "sheep, pigs, chickens, goats, horses, cats, dogs — you name it, I did it," Dr. Bell says.

When he started out on his own, however, in 1967, he decided to specialize in what he calls the "less exotic" animals.

The decision was made partly because he couldn't keep up with the various new diseases afflicting farm animals. It was also because he couldn't accept the harsh fact that farm animals are thought of in purely economic terms — "if you couldn't treat the animal for less than 10 per cent of its market value, you would kill it."

In practicality, Dr. Bell's professional experience has not been limited to cats and dogs. He's also treated fish, parakeets, hamsters and guinea pigs, not to mention a skunk (a "stinky experience," even though the animal was de-scented), a wild pheasant and a 60-pound python.

DR. BELL ADMITS he's a sucker for any animal in need of medical attention. Like the time a man found a small rabbit covered with mud in his backyard this summer after a heavy storm. Dr. Bell took the rabbit into his own home in Palatine, where he and his wife, Anne, spent many hours bottle-feeding the animal.

They eventually set the rabbit free in their backyard, and Dr. Bell says ruefully, "The little monster promptly destroyed my entire garden."

It's not always the animals who need help. Sometimes it's their owners.

"I don't profess to be an animal psychiatrist," Dr. Bell says, "but once in a while you get a situation where you have to counsel the family."

A common situation is when a young couple has a baby and diverts their attention from their pet to the child. "Animals go through a resentment period just like some people," Dr. Bell said.

In general, he contends, animals' behavior reflects the personality of the household in which they live: "You show me a nervous, high strung, barking dog and I'll show you a high tension household."

SOMETIMES, a veterinarian runs into a case of "pet abuse." One woman kept bringing in her cat, once with a broken leg, another time with a concussion. "It turned out there were marital problems and the husband was taking it out on the cat," Dr. Bell said. He kept the cat at his own home until the differences were settled.

The cat no doubt felt right at home. Dr. Bell's house abounds with four-legged creatures. Some are there only temporarily as relatives and friends vacation. Others are strays between homes. A couple, along with a bunch of tropical fish and guppies, live there.

Lee Bell surveys his living room, rugless, temporarily, because Melancholy Baby, Chee Chee and Yasue just got over the flu. "You have to be a nut, I guess," he says finally, "but we like them."

Vehicle Tax In County Is Outlawed

Residents of unincorporated Cook County were victorious in their fight against the newly enacted county motor vehicle tax yesterday when the tax was ruled unconstitutional in Cook County Circuit Court.

Judge Raymond S. Sarnow said the tax on residents and businesses in unincorporated areas did not provide any additional services for those taxed and was "constitutionally offensive."

The tax, similar to charges for municipal vehicle stickers, imposes a yearly charge of $10 to $15 per car and graduated rates for trucks. Sarnow said the county tax ordinance failed to meet the requirements of the home rule provision of the 1970 Illinois Constitution, which allows large municipalities to levy taxes for special purposes.

The county ordinance is silent as to the special services gained from the tax and is absent of any indication that the money raised would be used to pay for special services, Sarnow said.

IN A HEATED discussion between attorneys outside the courtroom, States Atty Paul Biebel promised an appeal of the decision. He said the decision was not made on the issues, only on his motion to dismiss the suit. Biebel had asked that the suit, filed by the Prospect Heights Improvement Association (PHIA) and the Cook County School Bus Company of unincorporated Elk Grove Township, be dismissed, on the grounds that the tax was unconstitutional.

"I don't feel it is over," Biebel said. "No affidavits have been filed, and the facts of the case are not being considered."

Edward Berman, attorney for PHIA and the school bus company, said, "If the tax is unconstitutional, there is nothing that could be pleaded to change the constitutionality."

"If it (the tax) is unconstitutional, it doesn't merit filing an answer," Berman told Biebel.

Jack Gilligan, chairman of the PHIA committee fighting the tax, said he was optimistic that the ruling would be in PHIA's favor. "I'm happy about the outcome," he said. "We had a good case, and the issues were reasonably clear."

Gilligan warned, however, that residents should not remove the stickers from their cars until the appeal is over. He also advised that residents who have not yet purchased the stickers to do so.

Charge Area Man In Hit-And-Run

A Palatine man has been charged with reckless homicide and leaving the scene of a fatal accident in connection with a hit-and-run incident on Palatine Road the night of Aug. 9.

Jack Eugene Cook, 52, of 1459 Joan Dr., Palatine, told Arlington Heights police yesterday he was driving in the area and may have hit something the night that 19-year-old Mary Gabl was struck and killed by a car as she was walking home from a friend's house.

Police said yesterday they had not yet checked Cook's car to see if it could have been involved in the case.

He was released on $2,500 bond with a court date set for Sept. 22.

That's It For A Year — Track's Closed

going downhill," added Larry Morley, another retired man who visits Arlington Park daily. Morley is from Rockford, but meets Goers at the track to sit in their favorite spot inside the clubhouse, watching the races on closed-circuit television.

As with Weidner, Goers and Morley complained most about the cleanliness of the track and grandstand. Goers commented that at tracks in Florida, "you can eat off the floor in the men's room, that's how clean they are." But such is not the case at Arlington Park, they sighed. Not anymore.

OTHER TRACK fans, not as ready to reveal their names as were the retired men, ("My wife would kill me if she knew I was here," said one) were just as quick to point out faults of the track. The complaints most voiced were that children should be banned from the track and that the horses and jockeys aren't what they are out east — or out west, depending on who you talk to.

Some people overlooked the problems at the track. Like the woman from Wisconsin, who had just won $75 in the daily double. Or the man from Kenosha, who was "just glad to get out of the house."

But the patrons who were happy with the track all said that they seldom attend the races. It was the perennial track-goers who said they wish Arlington Park would be its old self again.

"So what else is new," sighed Tom Rivera, Arlington Park's public relations representative, when confronted with the complaints. Rivera has heard it all before.

BUT THEN THIS has not been the best season for Arlington Park. Of the 77 racing days this season, 22 of them saw rain during the races. "And it looked like rain on a lot more," Rivera said. Add to those rainy days three weeks of construction on the Illinois Tollway and the abolition of gimmick betting by the Illinois Racing Commission, and it all adds up to problems for Arlington Park.

Rivera said these factors have led to a 14 per cent drop in attendance this year over last and a seven per cent drop in betting.

But then that's all history. Arlington Park has closed its doors to thoroughbred racing for this season, and the trumpet is sounding post time at Sportsman's Park today.

1. All of the alternatives, Buffalo Grove would not have a senior class in its first year of operation and students who will be seniors in 1973-74 would graduate from the schools they now are attending.

The four alternatives are:

1. All students now in Cooper Junior High School in Buffalo Grove and those living north of Palatine Road and attending Rand Junior High in Arlington Heights would attend Buffalo Grove High.

2. The same as Alternative One with the addition of students from the Dun-La Highlands and Buffalo Highlands in unincorporated Wheeling Township and of Cambridge subdivision in Buffalo Grove.

3. The same boundaries as Alternative One, except students in the Ivy Hill Elementary School area in Arlington Heights would continue to attend Hersey instead of going to Buffalo Grove.

4. Same boundaries as Alternative Two, except with Ivy Hill area attending Hersey as in Alternative Three.

IN ADDITION TO the four alternatives for the Buffalo Grove boundaries, the committee offered the board two proposals to adjust boundaries in the eastern portion of the Hersey High School attendance area to cut down the number of students attending Hersey.

In one proposal, students south of Kensington Road in Mount Prospect would be transferred to Prospect High School. In the other, students from Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 south of Palatine Road in Prospect Heights would be moved from Hersey to Wheeling.

Either of the proposals for the Hersey boundaries could be used in combination with any of the alternatives for the Buffalo Grove boundaries.

500 Residents Still Homeless

ter workers and volunteers spent all day and night Friday trying to get $1,300 of food safely out of the reach of flood waters at their Kirchhoff Road office.

The workers saved most of the ton of food from the water, which filled the office to eight inches. The food, which was donated recently to the center, will feed needy families from the area NOC serves.

A H. Entertainers in Rolling Meadows reported several feet of water in their Rohlfing Road building and extensive damage to electronic sound and music equipment.

BUT THE hardest hit appeared to be Three Fountains. Evacuation began Friday night, principally because the flood water in the parking garage was washing out gasoline from cars parked there creating what Mrs. Butsch called a hazard.

Maintenance crews from the apartment complex were assisted the past three days by the Rolling Meadows Civil Defense, the Rolling Meadows Fire Department, city public works crews, the Salvation Army from Fox Lake and a volunteer fire department from Round Lake.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Butsch estimated that 100 people are working on the cleanup detail. She claimed 22 million gallons of water filled the underground lot. When the water receded inches of silt and mud caked the floors and walls of the lot and cars and power equipment inside.

Mrs. Butsch said she hopes residents will be able to begin moving back by Wednesday or Friday at the latest. They will not be able to do so until the city, and the gas and electrical companies give clearance.

The three buildings that Mrs. Butsch manages contain 147 apartments and house about 350 people. One building in Phase II of the complex was also closed down. The buildings were being guarded round-the-clock by private security personnel. Mrs. Butsch said there has not been one report of burglary or looting.

Liability Leases, Hurdles For Bike Trail

Leases and liability are still minor hurdles to dividing up parts of the Commonwealth Edison right-of-way intended for Palatine Park District's proposed bicycle trail.

A lease for the 185-foot swath through Palatine has been in the works for nearly two years. Now it's in the hands of the utility company while minor changes are being made in related leases.

Once the lease is returned to the park district, residents bordering the right-of-way may get a license to extend their backyards for 50 feet on either side of the leased area.

The catch is — each resident requesting a license must produce a certificate of insurance coverage amounting to $300,000 personal injury and $500,000 per incident for the licensed area.

PARK DISTRICT Dir. Fred P. Hall is checking out a possibility of getting an insurance company to write one policy for all residents with the 50-foot land license. Unless that effort succeeds, homeowners will have to add the liability coverage to their current policies through their individual companies. And the $300,000-$500,000 coverage only partially covers possible injuries on the sections of land.

Residents' liability applies only to themselves or their guests who might be injured on the right-of-way, according to Park District Atty. Roger Bjorvik.

Bicyclists, hikers, or others injured in park-related activities on the property would be covered by the park district's insurance, Bjorvik said.

Previously-leased areas in northwest Palatine are causing the current holdup in the park district's lease. Part of the bicycle route runs through land presently being farmed by residents who have private leases with the utility company. Their leases allow a 20-foot wide property.

The area involved is north of St. Joseph's Home, west to the Palatine Hills Golf Course.

RESIDENTS ANXIOUS to obtain part of the right-of-way have been working toward some sort of lease arrangement with Commonwealth Edison for over two years. Initially, they were willing to grade and landscape the area at their own expense if they could get the go-ahead from the utility company. When the park district's progress became sluggish toward getting leases, some residents turned to Commonwealth Edison for individual leases, but were turned down.

Now, only minor hurdles block a resident-park district coalition for the right-of-way. The lease from Commonwealth Edison may be returned sometime this week. After that, the complications with insurance arrangements are the only obstacles to license agreements with residents.

County Vehicle Tax Is Ruled Unconstitutional

Residents of unincorporated Cook County were victorious in their fight against the newly enacted county motor vehicle tax yesterday when the tax was ruled unconstitutional in Cook County Circuit Court.

Judge Raymond S. Sarnow said the tax on residents and businesses in unincorporated areas did not provide any additional services for those taxed and was "constitutionally offensive."

The tax, similar to charges for municipal vehicle stickers, imposes a yearly charge of $10 to $15 per car and graduated rates for trucks. Sarnow said the county tax ordinance failed to meet the requirements of the home rule provision of the 1970 Illinois Constitution, which allows large municipalities to levy taxes for special purposes.

The county ordinance is silent as to the special services gained from the tax and is absent of any indication that the money raised would be used to pay for special services, Sarnow said.

IN A HEATED discussion between attorneys outside the courtroom, States Atty. Paul Biebel promised an appeal of the decision. He said the decision was not made on the issues, only on his motion to dismiss the suit. Biebel had asked that the suit, filed by the Prospect Heights Improvement Association (PHIA) and the Cook County School Bus Company of unincorporated Elk Grove Township, be dismissed, on the grounds that the tax was constitutional.

Edward Berman, attorney for PHIA and the school bus company, said, "If the tax is unconstitutional, there is nothing that could be pleaded to change the constitutionality."

"If it (the tax) is unconstitutional, it doesn't merit filing an answer," Berman told Biebel.

Jack Gilligan, chairman of the PHIA committee fighting the tax, said he was optimistic that the ruling would be in PHIA's favor. "I'm happy about the outcome," he said. "We had a good case, and the issues were reasonably clear."

Gilligan warned, however, that residents should not remove the stickers from their cars until the appeal is over. He also advised that residents who have not yet purchased the stickers to do so.

BERMAN SAID he and Atty. Donald Kreger would draw up a written order based on today's verbal ruling tomorrow for Judge Sarnow to sign. The judge made no decision on what to do with the vehicle funds collected in taxes earlier this year. The money is now being held in escrow and had been earmarked for the Cook County Sheriff's Department by Cook County Pres. George W. Dunne.

THE ANTICIPATED annual revenue hearings, Biebel pointed out that 90 percent of the Sheriff's department budget goes to protect 191,000 persons in unincorporated Cook County.

The PHIA filed the suit on behalf of all residents in unincorporated Cook County.

Water Damages School District Supply Room

More than three feet of water flooded the basement of the administration office at Mount Prospect School Dist. 57 over the weekend, damaging the supply store-room, according to Supt. Richard Percy.

"Anything you would expect to find in a school supply office was damaged in the flooding — mimeographed reading sheets, science kits, paper supply, tape, etc.," Percy said. "All our school records were submerged and we had to call the state office to find out which records we could keep and which we could throw out."

Percy said he didn't like to speculate on the cost of the water damage, but he did say he thought the loss would probably range between $3,000 and $5,000. "It could go as high as $20,000, however," Percy said.

In River Trails Dist. 26, the basement of Fehannville School, 1400 E. Kensington Rd., was flooded with about one inch of water, according to Asst. Supt. James Retzlaff.

"We pumped it out twice on Wednesday and Friday," Retzlaff said, "but it's a case where you can have pumps and everything but when the water gets higher than the windows, there isn't much you can do about it." The basement was cleaned up by Saturday, Retzlaff said.

KNEE-DEEP in water, a young resident of the 400 block of Dorset Street in Prospect Heights picks up her mail. The street has been impassable since Friday night when the storm brought the water level in the street to 25 inches. This is the fourth time this year the street has flooded.

Water On Dorset Hit 25 Inches

Crews Strive To Dry Out Street

Clean-up crews continued pumping out water in the 400 block of Dorset Street in Prospect Heights Monday after rains from both Wednesday and Friday night storms rendered the street impassable.

Friday's downpour brought the water level in the street up to 25 inches at its highest point, Larry Carrozza, Wheeling Township highway commissioner, said. Township crews have been draining water since Saturday, but the street is not expected to be fully cleared for another two days, Carrozza said.

According to Carrozza the flood problem is caused by a plugged drain tile between Olive Street and Clarendon Avenue. "It's old field tile and just can't take the pressure anymore," Carrozza said.

Carrozza said the township plans to install new drain tile on the street soon. "I was out with a private engineer this morning looking things over," he said. "They'll have a crew out there (Dorset Street) either Tuesday or Wednesday. We should have storm sewers in there by the end of September or the beginning of October," he said.

DESPITE THE township's promises of action, residents remained irate about what they called the township's lack of cooperation.

"This is the fourth time this year that the street has been impassable," Mrs. Antonie Kapel, 407 Dorset, said.

The flooding isn't something that happens only once in a while, Robert Baker, 406 Dorset, said. "This is something that occurs all the time when we have a rain a little above normal," he said.

"The road starts filling up every time we have about an inch and a half of rain," Mrs. Thomas Smith, 404 Dorset, said. "If we have two inches, we're really in trouble. We've been trying to get something done for years, but all you get is the royal run-around," she said.

"We'll probably have to have a small child drown first before anything is done," Mrs. Kapel said.

Registration Set At District Schools

Registration for students in Prospect Heights Dist. 23 is being held this week at the district's schools.

Students can register between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. through Friday at the school they will attend when classes begin Sept. 5. Book rental fees are $12 for first through fifth grades and $10 for sixth through eighth grades. Kindergartners must pay $3 and bring their birth certificate. All new students and fifth graders should bring completed physical exam forms.

Police Nab 1 Burglary Suspect, Other Gets Away In Manhunt

by JACK PENCHOFF

The man, whose alleged accomplice had just been arrested by Des Plaines police, eluded police dogs and a helicopter, escaping in a large field near the Des Plaines Oasis of the tollway.

The wanted man's alleged accomplice in an attempted burglary at Maxon's Gun Shop, 500 E. Northwest Hwy., Mount Prospect, was nabbed by Des Plaines Patrolman Michael Banner at the oasis after Banner trailed the pair for several miles. Banner said when he grabbed one suspect, the other man escaped into the field.

Arrested and charged with attempted burglary, was Mark Vanstockum, 21, of 4425 N. Natchez, Chicago.

According to Mount Prospect police, two men were seen by a patrolman on the roof of the gun shop about 6 p.m. The two men escaped when they saw the squad but not before a description of their auto and clothing was given to other police departments.

Mount Prospect police said they discovered a hole two feet wide in the roof and a saw, crowbar and rope nearby after the two men escaped from the scene.

Banner said in his report he saw the suspect's auto heading southbound on Elmhurst Road in Des Plaines moments after receiving the description. Banner said he was too far away to stop the auto and didn't catch up to them until they stopped at the Des Plaines Oasis.

The two suspects got out of their car and began walking rapidly towards the restaurant when Banner approached. He said he grabbed Vanstockum while the other man escaped.

Vanstockum reportedly told Banner he was picked up by the other man while hitchhiking on Elmhurst Road near Golf Road but Banner said in his report that Vanstockum was the driver of the auto before it reached Elmhurst Road.

Mount Prospect police and Des Plaines police combed the field for Vanstockum's alleged accomplice enlisting the aid of Cook County and State Police as well as a helicopter and several police dogs from the Chicago Police Department. The search was called off at 9 p.m. because of darkness.

Vanstockum reportedly admitted to Mount Prospect police that he was involved in the attempted burglary at Maxon's and has told police the identity of the other man, according to reports.

Vanstockum is being held in the Cook County Jail and is scheduled to appear in the Mount Prospect branch of Cook County Circuit Court Friday. A warrant has been issued for the arrest of his accomplice.

Kenneth Farnsworth, 12 Hatlen Ave., must have one of the most fascinating summer jobs around. He is one of the scientists working near Kampsville, Ill., at the Koster archaeological site.

Koster is a stratified site containing the ruins of at least 12 prehistoric settlements superimposed over one another in 34 feet of soil. Ruin 11, 29 feet below ground level, has been carbon-14 dated at 5100 B.C. Test probes reveal even earlier cultural materials below this level.

"We have here at Koster a record of at least 8,000 years of prehistory in Illinois," said Prof. Stuart Struver, one of the directors of the project.

"Preservation of artifacts and other remains is so remarkable that we have seeds, nuts and bones still recognizable after thousands of years. This will enable us to discover a great deal about the life of early man in eastern North America."

The Koster site is across the Illinois River from Kampsville, near the village of Eldred. Both the site and the Koster Archaeological Museum in Kampsville will be open to the public daily through Sept. 3.

Guides there show visitors the excavations in progress and answer their questions. Workers at the site include more than 100 scientists, research assistants, and college students.

Leland Farnsworth, Ken's father, says he has been down to visit the site a couple of times. "Stuart Struver said that if this site were in Africa or Europe, it would have world wide attention," he commented.

This project, however, depends largely on public support. One third of the expedition's expenses are covered by the National Science Foundation and Northwestern University. The rest comes from Koster expedition "friends," who donate $5 or more.

Each "friend" receives six progress reports during the year, as well as an invitation to the annual members weekend in August. Anyone interested in supporting the expedition may send contributions to the Foundation for Illinois Archaeology, 1243 Maple Ave., Evanston, Ill. 60202.

THERE'LL BE A star-a-long at the Mount Prospect Public Library Wednesday at 10:30 a.m. for preschoolers and their older brothers and sisters.

Leading the program will be Bryan Miller, with her guitar. Bryan recently returned from a summer in Europe. She studied Shakespeare and the modern British novel through Schiller College at the University of London.

Classes were scheduled for only four days each week so students could take weekend trips. On her long weekends, Bryan visited Oxford, Cambridge, Edinburgh, Inverness, and other places of interest.

At the close of the summer session, she spent a week visiting relatives in Duren, Germany. Next week she will return to Kenosha, Wis., where she will be a junior at Carthage College.

Bryan's mother is children's librarian at the Mount Prospect Public Library.

ANOTHER STUDENT just back from Europe is Isabelle Czarkowski of 407 W. Lombard St. Following a year of study at the University of Barcelona, Spain, she spent this summer traveling in eastern and western Europe.

This fall Isabelle will be a senior at Knox College in Galesburg, Ill., where she is majoring in Spanish and political science. She is this year's recipient of the college's Bennett Memorial Scholarship.

FRANK D. NICODEM, 919 Elm St., has been selected for another term on the board of directors of George Fox College in Newberg, Ore. Also renominated for another term was Oregon Senator Mark Hatfield. Nicodem has also been named 1972 Layman of the Year for the National Association of Evangelicals.

100 Mobile Park Residents Get OK To 'Go Home'

Elk Grove Village residents were still drying out yesterday in the wake of the worst rain and flooding in recent years.

Monday morning Red Cross volunteers reported that residents of the Elk Grove Mobile Home Park, 941 Higgins Rd., north of the village, could return to their homes. The volunteers said most of the water had receded and electrical power was restored.

Water supplies in the park were being checked for contamination and bottle gas supplies were being reconnected.

More than 100 people were evacuated from the park early Saturday when their power failed and their water became contaminated from the overflowing Salt Creek.

RESIDENTS COULD offer no estimate of damages to their trailers. It was estimated that less than 10 of the 170 trailers actually took in water.

Approximately 25 people were sheltered at Elk Grove High School. Another 25 families were taken to the Holiday Inn at Busse and Landmeier roads.

Emergency meals were provided by the Salvation Army. Capt. Wayne Griswold said 360 meals each for breakfast, lunch and dinner were served during the weekend. On Monday, 240 meals were served.

Griswold said emergency meals would be served as long as there was a need.

Griswold estimated that over 30 volunteers for the Salvation Army aided in the disaster. A spokesman for the Red Cross said approximately 25 volunteers from their agency worked during the weekend.

OTHER VOLUNTEERS from Schaumburg Civil Defense, Elk Grove Village Civil Defense Radio Club and Elk Grove Village Fire Department also assisted residents of the trailer court.

Elk Grove Village Fire Chief Allen Hulett said 20 homes in the village were pumped out.

An office building at 700 Nicholas, Centex North Plaza, had 375,000 gallons of water pumped out of it by the fire department. Hulett estimated damages to the office building at $1.5 million.

Hulett said the fire department pumped from a total 1,750,000 gallons of water from homes and businesses.

Charles Willis, village manager, said preliminary estimates of damage to public facilities totaled $64,200. He said no figure was available yet on damage to private homes, but said between 20 to 30 homes were flooded.

THE ELK GROVE VILLAGE Public Library is expected to be closed for the rest of the week because of flood damage.

Mary Clark, administrative librarian, said water reached the ceiling in the basement of the building. She said toilets in the first-floor washrooms overflowed, soaking the carpeting. The library will be closed until the carpets can be dried.

Miss Clark said the only damage to the building was the loss of ceiling tiles in the basement. A 16 film projector was also destroyed.

A few books in the adult reference section suffered slight water damage from rain blown through the windows and roof leakage. No books or furniture suffered serious water damage.

A SPOKESMAN for Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59 said some schools had been flooded, but no damage estimate was available.

The spokesman said little property damage was reported in school buildings. It was estimated that most of the flood expense would be for extra labor and services to clean up the buildings.

Jack Claes, superintendent of the Elk Grove Park District, said Lions Park Pool was closed for the summer because of the flooding. Pool water was contaminated when Salt Creek overflowed its banks.

School Board To Discuss New Pact, Flooding

The Prospect Heights Dist. 23 school board will hold a special meeting tomorrow to discuss possible future flooding at John Muir School and a pending new agreement with the Prospect Heights Park District.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the district administrative offices, 700 N. Schoenbeck Rd.

Supt. Edward Gredsky said the board would discuss means to prevent the possibility of future flooding at the school. Currently the site, at Drake Terrace and Oak Avenue, includes a detention basin, but officials fear the basin may not be adequate to prevent heavy flooding.

Dist. 23 officials have refused to grant easements to let Wheeling build a retention basin and two sewer lines on the Muir site. The basin would help alleviate flooding at the Pleasant Run apartment development. School board members do not want the basin on school property because they feel it would be a danger to children.

$200 In Tools Stolen

Tools valued at $200 were reported stolen from the home of Joan Robbins, 1808 Pheasant Tr., Mount Prospect. Mrs. Robbins told police she thought the tools had been taken Friday, possibly by one of two boarders who had lived in her home.

Fact-Finding Is Next Step In Pay Talks

Fact-finding will be the next step in Dist. 21 salary negotiations. The board of education approved the move Thursday night in reply to a written request from the Wheeling Faculty Council (WFC). The board approved the move at its regular meeting without going into executive session.

It also approved the recommendation of a special tax sheltered annuities committee to allow four new insurance companies to join four existing companies soliciting within the district. The companies were chosen after meeting eight requirements set down by the district.

Finally, the board approved the purchase of property for its 19th school site. The site is located off Jackson Drive near the Booths Tarkington and Carl Sandburg schools in Wheeling.

Board members also tabled one item — selecting a monitoring system for the entire district — and introduced a new policy that will be voted upon at the next meeting in two weeks.

THE POLICY DESCRIBES the actions of all parties involved in case a teachers' strike should be called this or any other school year in Dist. 21.

Supt. Ken Gill explained to the board the policy was not introduced solely because the contract has not been settled in the district. He said the district's attorneys, reviewing district policies, felt a strike procedure be necessary in case a strike should ever be called in the future.

In the meantime, the teachers and board are slated to go to fact-finding as soon as a fact-finder can be found. That can be anywhere from two weeks to two months, according to officials.

One board member said Thursday night it looks like the talks won't end until at least early November.

MARGO RICHTER, chairman of the WFC said she was glad the board decided to go to fact-finding. "I hope we can settle our differences at this step in the talks," she added following the meeting.

Following fact-finding there are no formal steps to take, except to start talks over again or strike.

Larry Halter, spokesman for the WFC and Illinois Education Association (IEA) said, after the mediation step was unsuccessful that if talks can't be settled in fact-finding his group may have to call a strike.

Gill said last Friday the board team is willing to talk with the WFC team at any time. "There is no law that says we have to wait until fact-finding to settle with our teachers. We are willing to sit down and try to get this thing settled. All they have to do is notify us," he said.

NO MATTER WHAT happens, the teachers in Dist. 21 will return to school without a contract next Tuesday, and will be paid according to last year's salary schedule.

Gill said he suspects the pay from a new contract will be retroactive, but added he can make no concrete statement on the issue until negotiations are finished, because it may be a small issue.

Eye 4 High School Boundary Plans

Four alternative proposals for boundaries for Buffalo Grove High School were to be presented last night to the High School Dist. 214 board of education.

The four alternatives were to be presented by a committee of district administrators and residents of Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights.

The proposals place varying parts of Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights in the attendance area for the new high school when it opens in September, 1973.

The board of education has said it will decide on final boundaries for the new high school by December of this year. Public hearings on the proposals are expected to be scheduled before the final boundaries are adopted.

ALONG WITH THE alternate boundaries, the committee has drawn up enrollment projections through the 1976-77 school year for Buffalo Grove, Wheeling and Hersey high schools.

All four proposals involve shifting students from the present Wheeling and Hersey attendance areas to Buffalo Grove.

In all of the alternatives, Buffalo Grove would not have a senior class in its first year of operation and students who will be seniors in 1973-74 would graduate from the schools they now are attending.

The four alternatives are:
1. All students now in Cooper Junior High School in Buffalo Grove and those must declare the area as a "disaster."

BOTH PUCINSKI and Republican Sen. Charles H. Percy have asked the White House for the disaster declaration. After touring the area by rowboat Sunday, Percy declared that in some cases, damage was as bad as those in the recent Pennsylvania floods.

Pucinski said there was "no question in my mind" that the declaration would be made.

He urged local officials to wire the White House asking for federal aid. He also advised homeowners and businessmen to obtain pictures, "preferably color pictures" of the damages in order to be able later to substantiate their claims.

living north of Palatine Road and attending Rand Junior High in Arlington Heights would attend Buffalo Grove High.

2. The same as Alternative One with the addition of students from the Dun-Lo Highlands and Buffalo Highlands in unincorporated Wheeling Township and of Cambridge subdivision in Buffalo Grove.

3. The same boundaries as Alternative One, except students in the Ivy Hill Elementary School area in Arlington Heights would continue to attend Hersey instead of going to Buffalo Grove.

4. Same boundaries as Alternative Two, except with Ivy Hill area attending Hersey as in Alternative Three.

IN ADDITION TO the four alternatives for the Buffalo Grove boundaries, the committee offered the board two proposals to adjust boundaries in the eastern portion of the Hersey High School attendance area to cut down the number of students attending Hersey.

In one proposal, students south of Kensington Road in Mount Prospect would be transferred to Prospect High School. In the other, students from Wheeling-Elk Grove Dist. 21 south of Palatine Road in Prospect Heights would be moved from Hersey to Wheeling.

Either of the proposals for the Hersey boundaries could be used in combination with any of the alternatives for the Buffalo Grove boundaries.

Disaster Relief Bill Just 2 Weeks Old

Federal officials yesterday were awaiting a declaration of inundated lands around the Salt Creek as a disaster area, an action which would mean full recovery of damages for hundreds of homeowners and low-interest loans for others.

Passage just two weeks ago of new legislation concerning disaster relief would mean that homeowners who suffered less than $5,000 damages would recover the full amount. Those who suffered more than that would be eligible for one per cent loans up to $50,000 for damages to real estate and $10,000 to personal property. Each loan would include a $5,000 "forgiveness."

U.S. Rep. Roman Pucinski, D.-Ill., explaining the terms of the new legislation, and estimated after inspecting the afflicted area that a substantial number of the homeowners affected had losses of less than $5,000. If they substantiated their claims, their loans would simply be marked "PAID."

Estimates of damages in Cook County ranged up to $2.5 million to some 1,850 homes and 100 businesses. In DuPage County, an estimated 3,000 homes suffered up to $5 million damages.

In order to qualify property owners for the federal aid, either the Small Business Administration or President Nixon

Appeals Board OKs Parking Variation

The Mount Prospect Board of Appeals last week approved a parking variation for Arnar-Stone Laboratories, 601 E. Kensington Rd. The firm is planning a new addition to the present building.

Building Dir. Buell Dutton said the new addition will be used primarily as a warehouse and would contain only three or four employees. Thus they asked for a reduction in the number of parking spaces required, even though they have room enough for more should they prove necessary.

This recommendation by the appeals board, like the others made Thursday night, now have to be approved by the village board.

The appeals board took no action on the request of Willie Lumbar Co., 100 W. Northwest Hwy., for parking, sign and basement variations. The board said the hearing will be held indefinitely until rezoning is granted by the plan commission and the board of trustees. The owners are trying to get one part of their property rezoned from industrial to commercial as they plan to add an addition to the building and remodel the structure.

MEMBERS OF THE appeals board said the Willie hearing will have to be readjusted at the petitioners' cost.

Other cases approved included a request by DiMucci Home Builders, Inc. to install a 100-foot high television antenna at the Mount Shire apartment clubhouse, 1821 Golf Rd. The antenna, which is currently a non-conforming use on a nearby single-family lot, will be used to pick up broadcasts of Chicago teams' home football and hockey games.

A request by John M. Haggard Jr., 1409 Sauk Ln., for a garage addition was also approved. However, the request for a special use as gas station and car wash at the southwest corner of Willow Road (Seminole Lane) and River Road was continued to next month's hearings because the petitioner did not have his plans ready. The station to go in at the site is reportedly a Mobile Oil Co. operation.

Flood-Plagued Surrey Ridge May Get Relief

There may be some relief in the offing for flood-plagued residents of Surrey Ridge West if a plan to pump water from glutted storm sewers into Salt Creek works as village officials hope.

According to Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson, the village would like to close off the storm sewer from Surrey Ridge West where it empties into Salt Creek to prevent rising creek water from backing up through the sewer and flooding the subdivision.

An electrically powered lift station, built near the sewer outfall, would be used to pump water from the sealed storm sewer into the creek.

Hanson said he is hopeful that the pumping station, which will cost an estimated $50,000 to $70,000, can be built this fall. He said the village already has secured an easement from Amling's Flowland on Algonquin Road in Rolling Meadows to build the pump house in back of the nursery near Salt Creek.

Village Engineer Allen Sander said he will seek Metropolitan Sanitary District approval of the plan later this week and he hopes bids for the project can be opened Sept. 18.

Sander said the storm sewer would be closed only during heavy rains. A sluice gate would be used to open and close the sewer outfall and the pumping station would be able to operate on emergency power in case of electrical power failure, he said.

PARTS OF Surrey Ridge West are among the worst flooding areas in the village and residents there have consistently petitioned the village to correct the problem.

Village officials say much of the flooding in the area occurs because water from Salt Creek backs up through Surrey Ridge West storm sewers during heavy outlet and pumping the water into the creek will help correct the backup problem.

Ultimately, however, they say construction of a large detention lake in the Ned Brown Forest Preserve is needed to solve the area drainage problem. That lake is part of a massive Salt Creek watershed improvement project. The State of Illinois, as one of 13 agencies involved in the project, has approved the program and it is hoped the plans can be sent to Washington later this week.

Much of Surrey Ridge West storm water now flows through a storm sewer that runs north along Harvard Avenue into a five-acre detention basin just south of White Oak Street, according to engineering drawings.

Water leaves the basin through a 30-inch sewer to White Oak where the sewer line turns west to old Wilke Road. At Wilke Road the line turns south and crosses Algonquin Road before emptying into Salt Creek.

It is there that the village hopes to build the sluice gate and pump house.

THE THUNDER OF thoroughbreds at Arlington Park Race Track ended Monday for the 1972 season. But the thunder of irate track fans was almost as loud as the hoofs on the track Monday. They say that the track isn't what it used to be, commenting there is as much dirt in the stands as on the track. Most confessed that they will be back next year, however.

Fans Say It's Not What It Used To Be

That's All For This Year—Track Is Closed

by DAVE MAHSMAN

Well, that's all for this year. Hope it's better next year.

Arlington Park Race Track closed its 45th season of thoroughbred racing yesterday, and the consensus of track fans is that the park "just ain't what it used to be."

Weidner pointed to the worn carpeting in the grandstand, betting tickets scattered over it like so much confetti.

"This used to be a beautiful track," Weidner said. "But now it's nothing but dust and dirt. If you want to throw your tickets into a trash barrel, you can't find one."

WEIDNER HAD gripes other than the cleanliness of the track and stands as well. He doesn't like the parking conditions for one thing. He said if he comes late, he can't find a place to park. And if he wants to leave early, he's blocked in by other cars.

And if he's thirsty, Weidner claims water is virtually unavailable. Sure, there are water fountains, "but they don't work. What water comes out of them is full of rust."

As an example of how the track has deteriorated, Weidner showed his program over for inspection. He said he hasn't seen a full card all season, and the last day was no exception.

With all these complaints, will Weidner be back next season?

"PROBABLY," he says. "If you win, I guess you can overlook (the problems)."

Other patrons at season's end saw things much as Weidner did.

"I come to the track every day, and I can definitely see that the place has been going downhill — and the horses ain't too much either," complained Bill Goers, a retired man from Chicago.

Charge Area Man In Hit-And-Run

A Palatine man has been charged with reckless homicide and leaving the scene of a fatal accident in connection with a hit-and-run incident on Palatine Road the night of Aug. 9.

Jack Eugene Cook, 52, of 1459 Joan Dr., Palatine, told Arlington Heights police yesterday he was driving in the area and may have hit something the night that 19-year-old Mary Gabl was struck and killed by a car as she was walking home from a friend's house.

Police said yesterday they had not yet checked Cook's car to see if it could have been involved in the case.

He was released on $2,500 bond with a court date set for Sept. 22.

Fired Teacher Tells Story In Court

Testifying in his own behalf, teacher John D. Fender said he believed in corporal punishment (striking students) when there are "violent altercations in class, like fights, or when students are disrespectful or abusive to other teachers or adults."

Fender's testimony came near the end of the five-day school board hearing, and the board expects to file a written decision in about a week. Fender, a 14-year teacher, was fired by the board on charges of "continued cruelty and violence in his relationships with students."

Fender's testimony came into direct conflict with some testimony already given in the case.

While Linda Calvert, 12, a student of Fender, said he hit her "12 or 13 times" without warning, Fender said he hit her four times, with ample warning.

"I had talked to her several times about her disruptive behavior in class," Fender said. "On the day of the incident I put her on notice and I said I would accept no more nonsense. When I returned to my desk she continued to talk, so I walked over and punished her."

Miss Calvert said she had been asking a neighbor for a pencil when Fender hit her without provocation.

MARY S. STEARNS, who had substitute taught in Fender's class prior to the alleged beating, testified that Miss Calvert had been such a disruptive influence on the class when she taught it that she left Fender a note to tell him about the disruption.

Fender admitted to hitting three other students, not more than twice each, and never with "adult force," in situations where he felt the action was necessary.

In one case, he admits to having hit the wrong student for "yodeling" in class.

"After I found out I had hit the wrong student I said I had made a mistake and was sorry," Fender said.

County Vehicle Tax Is Ruled Unconstitutional

Residents of unincorporated Cook County were victorious in their fight against the newly enacted county motor vehicle tax yesterday, when the tax was ruled unconstitutional in Cook County Circuit Court.

Judge Raymond S. Sarnow said the tax on residents and businesses in unincorporated areas did not provide any additional services for those taxed and was "constitutionally offensive."

The tax, similar to charges for municipal vehicle stickers, imposes a yearly charge of $10 to $15 per car and graduated rates for trucks. Sarnow said the county tax ordinance failed to meet the requirements of the home rule provision of the 1970 Illinois Constitution, which allows large municipalities to levy taxes for special purposes.

The county ordinance is silent as to the special services gained from the tax and is absent of any indication that the money raised would be used to pay for special services, Sarnow said.

IN A HEATED discussion between attorneys outside the courtroom, State Atty Paul Biebel promised an appeal of the decision. He said the decision was not made on the issues, only on his motion to dismiss the suit. Biebel had asked that the suit, filed by the Prospect Heights Improvement Association (PHIA) and the Cook County School Bus Company of unincorporated Elk Grove Township, be dismissed, on the grounds that the tax was constitutional.

"I don't feel it is over," Biebel said. "No affidavits have been filed, and the facts of the case are not being considered."

Edward Berman, attorney for PHIA and the school bus company, said, "If the tax is unconstitutional, there is nothing that could be pleaded to change the constitutionality."

"If it (the tax) is unconstitutional, it doesn't merit filing an answer," Berman told Biebel.

Jack Gilligan, chairman of the PHIA committee fighting the tax, said he was optimistic that the ruling would be in PHIA's favor. "I'm happy about the outcome," he said. "We had a good case, and the issues were reasonably clear."

Gilligan warned, however, that residents should not remove the stickers from their cars until the appeal is over. He also advised that residents who have not yet purchased the stickers to do so.

BERMAN SAID he and Atty. Donald Krieger would draw up a written order based on today's verbal ruling tomorrow for Judge Sarnow to sign. The judge made no decision on what to do with the vehicle funds collected in taxes earlier this year. The money is now being held in escrow and had been earmarked for the Cook County Sheriff's Department by Cook County Pres. George W. Dunne.

THE ANTICIPATED annual revenue hearings, Biebel pointed out that 90 percent of the Sheriff's department budget goes to protect 191,000 persons in unincorporated Cook County.

The PHIA filed the suit on behalf of all residents in unincorporated Cook County. Homeowners groups in the area contributed to raise funds for the legal fight.

Extend Hours For Voter Registration

The village clerk has announced a schedule of extended hours for voter registration at the Arlington Heights Municipal Building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

In addition to the normal 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday hours, the village hall will be open on two Saturdays, Sept. 9 and 16, from 9 a.m. to noon, according to Village Clerk Kenneth Bonder.

Voter registration ends Sept. 18 at the municipal building and on that date the clerk's office will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. to give eligible voters a last chance to register.

Any resident of Arlington Heights who will be at least 18 years old by the date of the next election, Nov. 7, and who will have lived here at least 30 days is eligible to register, Bonder said.

Signup Opens For Punt, Pass, Kick

Signup is now being held for the annual Punt, Pass and Kick contest at George Poole Ford, 400 W. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights.

The national contest, now in its 12th year, is sponsored by the National Football League and Ford Dealers of America, and is open to boys between the ages of 8 and 13.

Locally, the contest is being sponsored by Poole Ford and the Arlington Park District. The date for the contest has been tentatively scheduled for Sept. 30 at Pioneer Park, 500 S. Fernandez.

Alternate High School Boundary Plans Shown

Four alternate proposals for boundaries for Buffalo Grove High School were to be presented last night to the High School Dist. 214 board of education.

The four alternatives were to be presented by a committee of district administrators and residents of Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights.

The proposals place varying parts of Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights in the attendance area for the new high school when it opens in September, 1973.

The board of education has said it will decide on final boundaries for the new high school by December of this year. Public hearings on the proposals are expected to be scheduled before the final boundaries are adopted.

ALONG WITH THE alternate boundary plans, the committee has drawn up enrollment projections through the 1976-77 school year for Buffalo Grove, Wheeling and Hersey high schools.

All four proposals involve shifting students from the present Wheeling and Hersey attendance areas to Buffalo Grove.

In all of the alternatives, Buffalo Grove would not have a senior class in its first year of operation and students who will be seniors in 1973-74 would graduate from the schools they now are attending.

The four alternatives are:

Some people overlooked the problems at the track. Like the woman from Wisconsin, who had just won $75 in the daily double. Or the man from Kenosha, who was "just glad to get out of the house."

But the patrons who were happy with the track all said that they seldom attend the races. It was the perennial track-goers who said they wish Arlington Park would be its old self again.

"So what else is new," sighed Tom Rivera, Arlington Park's public relations representative, when confronted with the complaints. Rivera has heard it all be-

Only 6 Willing To Work

Crossing Guards Needed

The walk back to school next week will be a familiar routine to Arlington Heights children. Only one thing may be missing: Crossing guards at several intersections.

"We have a budget that enables us to hire 12 crossing guards per day, and that isn't even enough," said Sgt. Jack Weber.

Fender Tells Story In Court

poral punishment Fender is accused of using.

Gerardine Clifone, a teacher at Miner Junior High, testified that Basofin had, on two occasions "screamed in the faces" and "hit the neck, shoulder and back" of students.

Early in the 1970-71 school year, Miss Clifone said Basofin grabbed a female student by the hair as she was discussing a discipline problem with the student.

"He (Basofin) screamed in her face, hit her at the base of her neck and in the back, then slapped her across the side of the face," Miss Clifone said. "He yelled at her . . . then let her go with a jerk, and she ran out of school crying."

Basofin said, during testimony last week, that he had never hit a student in the face.

ALSO TESTIFYING for the defense was Kay Loubet, a retired school teacher, who taught at Miner Junior High during most of the 1971-72 school year, after teaching at the grade school level in the district for 12 years.

"The number of troublemakers was overwhelming. I was shocked by the amount of lying and stealing going on," she said. "There were times when there were up to 10 troublemakers in one class. I was a babysitter, watching equipment and making sure the students didn't hurt each other."

In his concluding statement, Ralph Miller, attorney for the school district, said "there is no denial of any of the incidents, and the school board will have to determine whether it excuses Fender's conduct."

fore. BUT THEN THIS has not been the best season for Arlington Park. Of the 77 racing days this season, 22 of them saw rain during the races. "And it looked like rain on a lot more," Rivera said.

Add to those rainy days three weeks of construction on the Illinois Tollway and the abolition of gimmick betting by the Illinois Racing Commission, and it all adds up to problems for Arlington Park. Rivera said these factors have led to a 14 per cent drop in attendance this year over last and a seven per cent drop in betting.

But then that's all history. Arlington Park has closed its doors to thoroughbred racing for this season, and the trumpet is sounding post time at Sportsman's Park today.

ber. "But we only have six people who are willing to work."

Weber says the traffic division's attempts to update and streamline the crossing guard service in the village are frustrated by apathy on the part of the residents.

"Maybe it's just that we have such an affluent community that the $10 to $12 per day is not worth the inconvenience of being a crossing guard," said Weber. The hourly rate for guards is $2.75.

WEBER EXPECTS a rash of telephone calls on Sept. 5, when schools open, from parents asking about the lack of crossing guards. He hopes to recruit a few concerned parents at that time.

At the present time, there is no screening process for the guards, some of whom Weber says are over 70 years old. "We can't afford the luxury of screening anyone," said Weber. "We figure some adult out there with the kids is better than no one at all."

According to Weber, housewives make the best crossing guards since they are usually familiar with children's reactions and find it relatively easy to control them.

"This position is also important to us from a public relations standpoint since this is the first contact some children have with representatives of the police department," said Weber. "We'd like the contact to be a good experience."

Each crossing guard receives individual instruction for the position, including classroom and street-corner training, Weber said. Guards wear a red and white safety vest, hat and badge provided by the police department.

"Ideally we would like guards at every corner children cross against traffic, but this year we can't even find the 12 guards we're budgeted for," said Weber.

Meetings This Week

Tuesday, Aug. 29

The public health and safety committee of the village board will meet at 8 p.m. at the Municipal Building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

Park Board Weighs Dike For Frontier

The Arlington Heights Park Board Monday night agreed to "look into" the feasibility of constructing a dike in Frontier Park in an effort to cooperate with residents of N. Fernandez Avenue who say the park is a source of flooding in their area.

More than half a dozen N. Fernandez residents appeared before the park board to explain their problem and show board members photographs of their flooded yards.

Betty Parks, 1900 N. Fernandez Ave., spokeswoman for the group, cited as problems caused by what they call excessive runoff:

—Wells along the street have been contaminated.

—Mosquitoes are breeding in the standing water.

—Lawn care is difficult.

—Children might drown in the water.

—The water is destructive to septic tanks.

—Water over the street makes it impassable for cars.

"We aren't saying the park has increased the amount of runoff," Mrs. Parks told the board. "We just want you people to slow it (the runoff) down."

BOARD MEMBER Kay Muller told the group that she talked to Arlington Heights Village Engineer Allen J. Sander about the problem Monday. She said Sander told her that there is nothing the park board could do to stop the flooding.

John Gilbert, a civil engineer who recently moved into the Fernandez Avenue area, agreed that flooding could not be prevented, but added that if runoff were slowed down, damage to property could be minimized.

With that, Thomas Thornton, director of parks and recreation said that a dike could be constructed at negligible cost when grading is done for a proposed tool shed in Frontier Park. He said a 12-inch pipe put in the dike would meter the water out, giving it time to flow off the residents' property, hopefully without major flooding.

Unit To Present Report On Waste

The Arlington Heights Environmental Control Commission likely will send its solid waste disposal report to the village board Sept. 16.

"We've been chewing this question for a year, and I think we can come up with a finalized report by Sept. 6," said Edward C. Kockelenberg, commission chairman. "That doesn't mean we won't keep abreast of further developments in the area of solid waste disposal in the village."

A month ago a subcommittee of the ECC recommended that a landfill be used to dispose of solid waste in the village, and the commission report is expected to make the same recommendation. In January the village administration recommended that a $4.5 million incinerator be constructed to dispose of solid waste.

ECC members still have a few questions to be answered before a final report is completed, including clarification of a recent engineering study of the landfill.

City Announces Bicycle Safety Program Start

Des Plaines school children guilty of bicycle traffic violations may soon have to appear in bicycle violators court after the city's new bicycle safety program goes into effect next week.

The new program will also include a series of lectures to be held in the classrooms of Des Plaines schools with a "talking bike" used to teach students bicycle safety.

The new program was explained at a press conference yesterday by Lt. James Scheskie, program director and Patrolman Robert Neil, the police department's first bicycle safety officer.

Neil said bicycle accidents have doubled since 1968 and bike sales are up 154 per cent since 1970. He said because the number of persons being injured in bicycle accidents since 1971 has nearly doubled, the city has decided "to do something about educating bicycle operators on laws and rules of the road."

NEIL SAID THE major part of the program will consist of educating the nearly 6,000 grammar school children in Des Plaines about bicycle safety.

He said he will try to give the hour and a half safety lecture in each classroom for grades three through six in Des Plaines elementary schools.

The bicycle safety lecture is titled "Ghost Riders" because, according to Scheskie, 85 per cent of all bicycle accidents occur because the bike rider rides as if he is invisible and unaware motorists don't see the bike rider.

The "Ghost Riders" program will be made up in part, of a "talking bike." The specially equipped bicycle will have lights located on the various parts of the bike.

The lights will be activated by remote control and each part will light up as the bicycle safety officer explains each part's function and importance. Also used in the lecture will be an overhead projector and flip charts explaining safety techniques and movies stressing the importance of bicycle safety in cartoon form.

The "Ghost Riders" educational program will be completed with a bicycle rodeo which will include an obstacle course for bicyclists to test their skill. Also youngsters will have their bicycles checked out for safety and will be asked to register their bikes and receive a free city bicycle license.

Scheskie said members of the Optimist Club and the Des Plaines Police reserves will conduct the bicycle rodeos which will be held at one of the elementary schools on Saturdays.

In order to enforce the safety rules, violators will be issued warnings and in some cases court appearances will be scheduled for the new Bicycle Violators Court.

NEIL SAID THE bicycle court would not begin for a couple of months until youngsters become aware of the safety program. He said the court is intended for youngsters under 16 years old but by law they will not be required to appear in court. However a follow-up letter will be sent advising the violator that subsequent violations might result in a ticket being issued for regular traffic court.

Bicycle licenses have been made free of charge to residents and can be obtained at the Des Plaines police station, 1412 Miner St. Under the new program, riding a bike that has no license will be a violation and warnings will be issued to the owner.

Neil said adult groups who wish to hear the lecture or know more about the program should contact him or Lt. Scheskie. He said because of the increasing number of adult bicyclists the city is looking into a more refined program to instruct adults in bicycle safety.

Neil added the city is also looking into the possibility of a bicycle violators court for adults, too.

THE ORBIT was a featured ride at last weekend's carnival in Des Plaines sponsored by the Cypress Chapter of the Women's American ORT. Some 45 children from Maryville Academy in Des Plaines were guests of the group at the fund raiser, which was held Thursday through Sunday at the northeast corner of Oakton and Lee streets. The Oktoberfest, held at the same corner last weekend by the Des Plaines Jaycees, "did quite well" despite the bad weather Friday, according to spokesman Jim Searcy.

Vow Water Reclamation Plant 'Won't Stink'

by ANNE SLAVICEK
Second of Two Parts

Even though sewage from nine North-west suburban communities will be treated at the proposed O'Hare Water Reclamation Plant, the plant isn't going to have a bad odor, according to Ben Sosewitz, Metropolitan Sanitary District Superintendent.

Sosewitz told the Herald he can "guarantee" the plant will not give off offensive odors to annoy residents living near the 105 acre plant site at Oakton Street and Elmhurst Road in Des Plaines.

For one thing, Sosewitz said neither the state nor the federal government would approve the plant or help finance it if it were to pollute the air in the surrounding neighborhood with offensive odors.

Sosewitz says it is wrong for residents to point to the admittedly-smelly sewage treatment plant in Hanover Park and say that the same thing will happen in Des Plaines.

The Hanover Park plant has been chronically overloaded and the district has been unable to expand the plant fast enough to keep pace with growth in the area, he said.

THE BLAME FOR THE overloading lies with developers and communities in the area served by the Hanover district has had to store the excess sewage in ponds "in order to give as much water as possible some treatment before releasing it into streams in the area," Sosewitz said. And it is the ponds which emit the odors.

In the case of the proposed O'Hare plant the district has a series of expansion steps already scheduled for the plant which will eventually lead to the plant treating 98 million gallons of water per day.

No additional land will be needed at the Oakton Street and Elmhurst Road site in order to expand the plant to that maximum, Sosewitz said.

WATER GOING THROUGH the plant will receive a three stage treatment process which will remove 99 1/2 per cent of the bacteria and suspended solids from the sewage. The remaining liquid then goes through processes of nitrification, ammonia removal, phosphate removal (if necessary), and chlorination, Sosewitz explains.

The resulting effluent is pure enough that, with additional chlorination, it could be used for drinking water, Sosewitz said. It is as pure, if not purer, than average drinking water reserves, he said.

The O'Hare plant will also not treat sludge which is a process capable of producing odors, Sosewitz said.

SLUDGE FROM THE O'Hare plant will be transported to the Salt Creek Water Reclamation Plant in unincorporated Schaumburg for treatment, Sosewitz said, adding the MSD does not anticipate any odor at the Salt Creek plant either.

"But sludge affects the quality of treatment and can cut operating efficiency and overload a plant," Sosewitz said.

Because residents fear odors from the plant and because the City of Des Plaines is losing tax revenue on the land, the city is currently suing the MSD to halt plans for the plant. An earlier court decision on the first suit filed by Des Plaines gave the Sanitary District immunity from local zoning laws which would not have allowed the plant to be built on the site.

The MSD will seek federal and state funding to pay up to 80 per cent of the cost of the plant once engineering designs are completed, Sosewitz said. Although the funding is not approved, both state and federal long range plans al-

Police Nab, Charge Two With Theft

Two men accused of breaking into the garages of six south side Des Plaines homes were arrested by Des Plaines police Sunday while they were loading their auto with two bicycles police said were stolen moments before from a city alderman.

According to reports, patrolmen Ken Randolph and James Pickell apprehended two Chicago youths as they were putting a disassembled bicycle into the back seat of their auto on the 1900 block of Spruce Street about 2:40 a.m.

Police checked the registration of the bicycle and found it belonged to Arthur Erbach, 1275 Prospect Ave., a fifth ward alderman in Des Plaines.

Police searched the trunk of the auto after Erbach told them two bicycles were stolen from his garage, according to reports.

RANDOLPH SAID in his report that on searching the trunk, police found tools, tape players, tapes and the second bicycle belonging to Erbach.

The two youths, Stephen Baird, 19, of 3752 N. Mozart and Detlef Fritze, 19, of 3430 N. Neva, both of Chicago, reportedly told police later they stole the items in the trunk of the car from six garages earlier Sunday.

Besides Erbach's garage, Baird and Fritze admitted to burglaries at 1971 Spruce St. where the registration was taken from an auto; 1496 Algonquin Rd., where a tape player and 12 tapes valued at $122 were taken from an auto; 1970 Spruce St. where tools valued at $60 were stolen; 1223 Prospect Ave. where a tape deck and 27 stereo tapes all valued at $245 were stolen and 1946 Ash St. where nothing was taken, according to police.

Police said all the burglaries occurred when thieves broke into garages at the residences.

Baird was released on a $3,000 bond and Fritze is being held in the Cook County Jail in lieu of a $3,000 bond. Both were scheduled to appear in the Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court Sept. 21 at 1:30 p.m.

Construction Tools Are Reported Stolen

At least $3,575 worth of construction tools were stolen from a south side Des Plaines construction site sometime over the weekend.

Police said thieves entered the rear of a new office building site and entered through window placements where window panes have not yet been installed.

Police said thieves tried open a locked cabinet to get the tools belonging to Chell & Anderson Construction, 5425 N. Kedzie, Chicago. The theft occurred at a building the firm is constructing at 2600 River Rd.

Supt. Sahlberg Addresses Teachers

Changes in family life must bring changes in education, said Eric Sahlberg, the new superintendent at Des Plaines Elementary School Dist. 62, in an hour-long address to teachers Monday.

Sahlberg pointed to the changes in everyday life due to advances in technology and their effect on the elementary school child. He encouraged teachers to understand the creative ability of each child, make use of his potential, and stress emotional as well as intellectual awareness. He also urged teachers to improve the level of expectations from all children despite their ethnic or economic background, and study the behavior of both student and teacher in the learning process.

Each child is an individual, with unique experiences, a unique understanding of the world around him and unique creative ability, said Sahlberg. In educating a child, his own particular abilities should be considered, Sahlberg said.

The "children of change" are growing up in a society where the economy has changed from agricultural to industrial, from rural to urban, from a time of scarcity to a time of abundance and wealth, from the stable changeless life of the small town to a highly mobile home life.

CHILDREN BORN in 1914 grew up with two wars and a severe economic depression and were nurtured on American nationalism and patriotism in the 1920's, said Sahlberg.

Children of the 1950's have grown up with the atomic bomb, satellites, racism and the cold war all brought to life by the mass communications media. Social changes brought on by today's youth include a voice in government, the war on poverty, the withdrawal of troops from Vietnam, a revision of the draft, a shake-up in political conventions and a voice for ethnic minority groups, said Sahlberg.

Today's youth are constantly asking, "Who am I and where am I going?" said Sahlberg. The "task of educators who receive the children of change is to aid in answering these questions," he said.

A sidelight to the dispute between Des Plaines and the MSD is the city's refusal to vacate a three-block section of Wille Road which cuts through the bottom third of the proposed sewage treatment plant site.

Sosewitz said the city's opposition is a "serious mistake" which will affect safety, and will hike operating costs of the plant which will in turn mean higher taxes for local taxpayers.

But Sosewitz said the MSD does not know how much more it will cost to build the plant if the public street remains.

Although Sanitary District officials have indicated in the past the plant can be built with the street in place, they have also said the MSD might move to legally condemn the road if the cost of leaving it in place proves too high.

ANOTHER COURT BATTLE over the power of the city as opposed to the power of the sanitary district would surely result from such a condemnation suit however.

Sosewitz told the MSD board of trustees at a meeting last week that the city has refused to vacate the street. He told the trustees shortly before an executive session that he wanted to bring them up to date on the entire situation involving the O'Hare Water Reclamation plant.

SAHLBERG OUTLINED seven goals for educating the "children of change." The child should think well of himself, he should seek associations with people who share mutual needs and should not be afraid of change. He should also see the value of his mistakes, develop human values, know what he stands for and stick to it, and he should be cast in a creative role within his own environment.

Sahlberg called the "bell shaped curve," a model for computing averages, often used in assigning academic grades, a "statistical monster." He said it discourages individual differences and terms the child who does not fit in the curve as "abnormal or deviate."

"We must become increasingly aware of the different approaches to learning and the different behavior of individual pupils."

Official Charges LWV 'Duped' By The Democrats

A township official has charged the League of Women Voters "has been duped by the Democratic Party" in its efforts to abolish Maine Township government.

Philip Raffie, township clerk, claimed 79 per cent of the petitions presented to place a referendum question abolishing township government on the Nov. 7 ballot, were circulated by Democratic Party workers or candidates.

In a press statement, Raffie said the abolition drive "is a diversionary tactic of the Democrats, who, due to the fact that they have a weak ticket for the November election, are hoping to divert our time from the presidential ticket to the defense of township government."

Three league groups have charged that the township government, traditionally controlled by the Republicans, is antiquated and duplicates services of other government agencies. The 1970 Illinois Constitution allows townships to be merged or abolished by referendum vote, according to the league.

DOLORES MCCABE, a member of the citizens committee formed by league groups in Des Plaines, Park Ridge and Morton Grove-Niles, said the charge by Raffie is "a lot of smoke to disguise the real issue."

"It's quite possible that some Democrats or their acquaintances were asked to pass petitions. We didn't refuse any help. We wouldn't refuse any Republican help," she said when contacted by a Herald reporter.

"We can't avoid the political charges. I think the issue of the townships has to rely on the merits of whether the township as such is doing the job it's supposed to be doing," Mrs. McCabe said.

Mrs. Susan D'Hondt, president of the Des Plaines League of Women Voters, said she had no comment on Raffie's charges other than to say the abolition drive "hasn't been undertaken because of any individuals involved or for any political reasons."

"My point is that people who know the league know that we're interested in issues and know that we're non partisan. We have lent our support to this because it is an issue that we feel the public should be vitally interested in," said Mrs. D'Hondt when contacted by a reporter.

In his statement, Raffie said that of the 270 petitions filed Aug. 21 by the league citizens committee, "212 can be directly traced to members of the Democratic Party."

HE SAID "79 per cent of the petitions filed were circulated by known Democratic precinct captains, co-captains, block captains and candidates of the Democratic Party."

County Motor Vehicle Tax Outlawed

Residents of unincorporated Cook County were victorious in their fight against the newly enacted county motor vehicle tax yesterday when the tax was ruled unconstitutional in Cook County Circuit Court.

Judge Raymond S. Sarnow said the tax on residents and businesses in unincorporated areas did not provide any additional services for those taxed and was "constitutionally offensive."

The tax, similar to charges for municipal vehicle stickers, imposes a yearly charge of $10 to $15 per car and graduated rates for trucks. Sarnow said the county tax ordinance failed to meet the requirements of the home rule provision of the 1970 Illinois Constitution, which allows large municipalities to levy taxes for special purposes.

The county ordinance is silent as to the special services gained from the tax and is absent of any indication that the money raised would be used to pay for special services, Sarnow said.

IN A HEATED discussion between attorneys outside the courtroom, States Atty. Paul Biebel promised an appeal of the decision. He said the decision was not made on the issues, only on his motion to dismiss the suit. Biebel had asked that the suit, filed by the Prospect Heights Improvement Association (PHIA) and the Cook County School Bus Company of unincorporated Elk Grove Township, be dismissed, on the grounds that the tax was constitutional.

Edward Berman, attorney for PHIA and the school bus company, said, "If the tax is unconstitutional, there is nothing that could be pleaded to change the constitutionality."

"If it (the tax) is unconstitutional, it doesn't merit filing an answer," Berman told Biebel.

Jack Gilligan, chairman of the PHIA committee fighting the tax, said he was optimistic that the ruling would be in PHIA's favor. "I'm happy about the outcome," he said. "We had a good case, and the issues were reasonably clear."

Gilligan warned, however, that residents should not remove the stickers from their cars until the appeal is over. He also advised that residents who have not yet purchased the stickers to do so.

BERMAN SAID he and Atty. Donald Kreger would draw up a written order based on today's verbal ruling tomorrow for Judge Sarnow to sign. The judge made no decision on what to do with the vehicle funds collected in taxes earlier this year. The money is now being held in escrow and had been earmarked for the Cook County Sheriff's Department by Cook County Pres. George W. Dunne.

THE ANTICIPATED annual revenue hearings, Biebel pointed out that 90 per cent of the Sheriff's department budget goes to protect 191,000 persons in unincorporated Cook County.

The PHIA filed the suit on behalf of all residents in unincorporated Cook County.

Postpone Presentation Of Oakton Site

by KATHERINE BOYCE

The proposed site for the permanent campus for Oakton Community College will not be presented to the Illinois Junior College board for approval Sept. 15 as college officials had planned four weeks ago.

One member of the state board and two Oakton board members have expressed their disapproval of the proposed site at Beckwith Road and Narragansett Avenue in Morton Grove during the past week.

College Pres. William Koehnline yesterday said the college has decided not to seek approval of the chosen site at the next state board meeting Sept. 15. Koehnline was authorized to appear before the state board by the college board of trustees when the site was announced Aug. 3.

SINCE THEN the site has been the subject of controversy after a citizens' group, Niles Township Elementary Dist. 67, and the villages of Morton Grove and Oakton all came out against it. Trustees Griffith MacDonald and Stephen Loska attacked the college board's site choice in a minority report last week. Koehnline and LeRoy Wauck, college board president later learned that Willard Brown Sr., of Palatine, a member of the state board, also disapproves of the Beckwith Road site.

Brown is an executive with the Arthur Rubloff & Co., real estate developers and, according to the IJC vice chairman, Merlin Karlock, Brown is "one of the nation's experts on real estate." Karlock added Brown is an influential member of the board when real estate matters are being considered.

Brown told the Herald the site is "very controversial" because the owners of property included in it have refused to sell. Mrs. Louise Hart, daughter of Mrs. Hubert Silberman, owner of one of the largest parcels of land, last month said the family would not sell its land. Owners of other large portions of the site property, the Helen Hoffman family and Mrs. Lorraine Sintzel, have also indicated an unwillingness to sell.

BROWN SAID HE had hoped the board could find a willing seller. There are apparently only two possible sites in the district whose owners are willing to sell. Both are owned by the Chicago Catholic Archdiocese and are located in the far northwest corner of the college district.

Brown suggested that Oakton try to acquire land around its temporary campus at 7800 N. Nagle Ave., Morton Grove to supplement the eight acres they now lease from the Cook Electric Co. In the past, the college has been unsuccessful in acquiring more land adjacent to the temporary campus.

Karlock said that the purchase of land adjacent to the temporary campus would allow the college to "more economically and conveniently use the facilities" on the temporary campus.

He said he hoped condemnation of land for Oakton's permanent campus could be avoided but "at all times we have to consider the welfare of the entire district. If the need arises, we feel that the local board is justified in condemnation."

This spring, the state board withdrew its approval of the Maryhill Cemetery site, chosen last fall by the college for a permanent campus. The Maryhill choice also stirred a controversy because a condemnation suit was filed against the owners of the land, the Chicago Catholic Archdiocese.

KARLOCK SAID THE state board is asking Oakton to find a site centrally and conveniently located in the district. He said it must have a network of access roads running to it and the site must be large enough to accommodate a building complex as well as parking facilities.

The Beckwith Road site has been criticized because its size, 52 acres, is just two acres above the minimum set by the state board. Karlock, however, told the Herald that the Beckwith site is "definitely" large enough for Oakton's campus.

The state board has recommended community colleges limit maximum enrollment to the equivalent of 6,000 full time students and that a second campus be built if enrollment begins to exceed that number. Karlock said it is not a "hard and fast rule" but educators have made studies which show that a campus larger than 6,000 students is disorderly and presents problems.

Koehnline said the college hopes to recruit people in the district to help officials convince the state board that there is no site that will meet all of the state's criteria. The state board "wants a site that has no controversy," said Koehnline, who added that such a site doesn't exist.

Residents who live in the area adjacent to the proposed site have complained that the campus would cause traffic problems, is too small for Oakton's campus, and that it would be in violation of Morton Grove zoning ordinances.

Nab Burglary Suspect, Other Flees

by JACK PENCHOFF

A burglary suspect, one of two men wanted for a break-in attempt at a Mount Prospect gun store, escaped an extensive police manhunt Sunday in the area near the Northwest Tollway and Mount Prospect Road.

The man, whose alleged accomplice had just been arrested by Des Plaines police, eluded police dogs and a helicopter, escaping in a large field near the Des Plaines Oasis of the tollway.

The wanted man's alleged accomplice in an attempted burglary at Maxon's Gun Shop, 500 E. Northwest Hwy., Mount Prospect, was nabbed by Des Plaines Patrolman Michael Banner at the oasis after Banner trailed the pair for several miles. Banner said when he grabbed one suspect, the other man escaped into the field.

Arrested and charged with attempted burglary was Mark Vanstockum, 21, of 4425 N. Natzche, Chicago.

According to Mount Prospect police, two men were seen by a patrolman on the roof of the gun shop about 6 p.m. The two men escaped when they saw the squad but not before a description of their auto and clothing was given to other police departments.

Mount Prospect police said they discovered a hole two feet wide in the roof and a saw, crowbar and rope nearby after the two men escaped from the scene.

Banner said in his report he saw the suspect's auto heading southbound on Elmhurst Road in Des Plaines moments after receiving the description. Banner said he was too far away to stop the auto and didn't catch up to them until they stopped at the Des Plaines Oasis.

Supt. Sahlberg Addresses Teachers

Changes in family life must bring changes in education, said Eric Sahlberg, the new superintendent at Des Plaines Elementary School Dist. 62, in an hour-long address to teachers Monday.

Sahlberg pointed to the changes in everyday life due to advances in technology and their effect on the elementary school child. He encouraged teachers to understand the creative ability of each child, make use of his potential, and stress emotional as well as intellectual awareness. He also urged teachers to improve the level of expectations from all children despite their ethnic or economic background, and study the behavior of both student and teacher in the learning process.

Boy Scout Troop 63 of Des Plaines spent a week at summer camp at the Cliff House near the Wisconsin Dells. Ten boys from the Troop attended. With the boys was Scoutmaster Pat Conway, Asst. Scoutmaster Marv Hanson, J. Self and Junior Leader Pat Conway Jr. Most of the boys attended moved up a rank or earned merit badges.

Kent Towler - Tenderfoot Badge; Ron Voyda - First Class Badge, Cooking and Camping Merit Badges; Dick Gearhart - Second Class Badge and Cooking and Camping Merit Badges; Karl Schlatter - Tenderfoot Badge; Lenny Carlson - Second Class; Ted Johnson - Cooking and Camping Merit Badges. Tim Conway, Mike Cleary and the rest of the boys earned the Paul Bunyan Axemanship Award.

The boys went on an overnight hike, a mapping and compass hike and a treasure hunt. The winners of the treasure hunt were Pat Conway Jr., Ted Johnson, Dick Gearhart, Tim Conway and Karl Schlatter. Each boy won a beach towel and four cans of soda. One day the boys were given a treat and spent the day at the Wisconsin Dells. One of the highlights of the day was seeing the Tommy Bartlett Water Show. A great time was had by all attending summer camp.

Any boys interested in joining Troop 63 may attend any meeting. The troop meets at South School Monday evenings at 7:30 p.m.

ON JULY 31 Troop 22 of St. Mary's Church, Des Plaines, left for their annual summer camp. There were 25 Scouts and seven adult leaders. This year they chose Mirror Lake State Park in Baraboo, Wis., near the Dells. The troop was at camp for 10 days. This campout offered the boys many things to do such as swimming, fishing, canoeing, and hiking. The trip enabled the boys to work on many outdoor merit badges.

The adult leaders who accompanied the troop were Alan Motz, Tom Brennan, Bob Melko, John Fahey, John Littwin, Leroy Carr and Ron Vellone. The boys and their parents wish to thank these men for their leadership.

Mobile Home Residents Return To Their Homes

Elk Grove Village residents were still drying out yesterday in the wake of the worst rain and flooding in recent years.

Monday morning Red Cross volunteers reported that residents of the Elk Grove Mobile Home Park, 941 Higgins Rd., north of the village, could return to their homes. The volunteers said most of the water had receded and electrical power was restored.

Water supplies in the park were being checked for contamination and bottle gas supplies were being reconnected.

More than 100 people were evacuated from the park early Saturday when their power failed and their water became contaminated from the overflowing Salt Creek.

RESIDENTS COULD offer no estimate of damages to their trailers. It was estimated that less than 10 of the 170 trailers actually took in water.

Approximately 25 people were sheltered at Elk Grove High School. Another 25 families were taken to the Holiday Inn at Busse and Landmeier roads.

Emergency meals were provided by the Salvation Army. Capt. Wayne Griswold said 360 meals each for breakfast, lunch and dinner were served during the weekend. On Monday, 240 meals were served.

Griswold said emergency meals would be served as long as there was a need.

Griswold estimated that over 30 volunteers for the Salvation Army aided in the disaster. A spokesman for the Red Cross said approximately 25 volunteers from their agency worked during the weekend.

OTHER VOLUNTEERS from Schaumburg Civil Defense, Elk Grove Village Civil Defense Radio Club and Elk Grove Village Fire Department also assisted residents of the trailer court.

Elk Grove Village Fire Chief Allen Hulett said 20 homes in the village were pumped out.

An office building at 700 Nicholas, Centex North Plaza, had 375,000 gallons of water pumped out of it by the fire department. Hulett estimated damages to the office building at $1.5 million.

Hulett said the fire department pumped a total 1,750,000 gallons of water from homes and businesses.

Charles Willis, village manager, said preliminary estimates of damage to public facilities totaled $64,200. He said no figure was available yet on damage to private homes, but said between 20 to 30 homes were flooded.

THE ELK GROVE VILLAGE Public Library is expected to be closed for the rest of the week because of flood damage.

Await Disaster Declaration,

Federal officials yesterday were awaiting a declaration of inundated lands around the Salt Creek as a disaster area, an action which would mean full recovery of damages for hundreds of homeowners and low-interest loans for others.

Passage just two weeks ago of new legislation concerning disaster relief would mean that homeowners who suffered less than $5,000 damages would recover the full amount. Those who suffered more than that would be eligible for one per cent loans up to $50,000 for damages to real estate and $10,000 to personal property. Each loan would include a $5,000 "forgiveness."

U.S. Rep. Roman Pucinski, D-11th, explained the terms of the new legislation, and estimated after inspecting the afflicted area that a substantial number of the homeowners affected had losses of less than $5,000. If they substantiated their claims, their loans would simply be marked "PAID."

Estimates of damages in Cook County ranged up to $2.5 million to some 1,000 homes and 100 businesses. In DuPage County, an estimated 3,000 homes suffered up to $5 million damages.

In order to qualify property owners for the federal aid, either the Small Business Administration or President Nixon must declare the area as a "disaster."

BOTH PUCINSKI and Republican Sen. Charles H. Percy have asked the White House for the disaster declaration. After touring the area by rowboat Sunday, Percy declared that in some cases, damage was as bad as those in the recent Pennsylvania floods.

Pucinski said there was "no question in my mind" that the declaration would be made.

He urged local officials to wire the White House asking for federal aid. He also advised homeowners and businessmen to obtain pictures, "preferably color pictures" of the damages in order to be able later to substantiate their claims.

Mayor Robert Teichert of Mount Prospect also said yesterday that he will ask the Department of Local Government Affairs to inspect the damage and to determine whether any state aid is available to victims of the flooding.

A spokesman for the Small Business Administration in Chicago said that field offices would be established as soon as possible if disaster aid is approved, and information on applications for funds would be distributed.

Rogers Sends Arlington Home

by PAUL LOGAN

RICHMOND, IND. — When the American Legion Regional Tournament began here Wednesday, Kokomo's Tom Underwood was the most talked-about pitcher.

When the tourney ended late Sunday night, Chuck Rogers received all the attention in the little community which borders his native state. Using a lively fast ball and a crackling curve, he struck out 21 Arlington Heights batters to lead Findlay, Ohio to the championship, 3-0, at Municipal Stadium.

This was a very fine Arlington team, but it finally met its match during the double-elimination tourney. After two successive wins, Heights had lost to the Ohio state champ on Friday, 16-8. Although the locals played much better Sunday, Rogers just proved to be too tough to handle.

Coach Lloyd Meyer's team knocked off some pretty high caliber opponents for the past couple of weeks in tourney action, but it ran into the best in Findlay. When you have to lose, there's some slight consolation in doing so to the top team.

Rogers' talent was showcased in the first game of the Great Lakes Regional as he beat Wisconsin 3-2 while fanning 18.

"I've never had that many," said Rogers of his massive strikeout total against Arlington. "I usually average about 15 or 16 strikeouts and two or three walks."

However, a super athlete can usually be expected to come up with the outstanding performance when it's needed. And so it was for this big (6-5, 220) right-hander, to Arlington's dismay, as he fashioned a three-hitter.

After retiring the first seven batters in order, Jim Hopkins — the Arlington pitcher — got a piece of a slow curve and beat it out for an infield hit. And one out later, Bert Newman bunted his way on and Pat Broderick walked. Then Rogers forced Mark Leonhard to pop up to third which ended one of only two big threats mounted by the locals.

The next five innings were filled mostly with strikeouts as this soon-to-be University of Michigan athlete held Heights at bay. However, in the fourth a hitless incident occurred which set the tempo for the rest of the game.

Hopkins struck out swinging with runners on first and second to end the inning. In his disgust because of his failure, Hopkins tossed his bat. The umpire — following the rules very strictly — threw him out of the game. Needless to say, trailing 2-0 and having one of your star pitchers ejected made quite a few people upset.

Leonhard, who started in center field, did a fine job in relief, only allowing three hits and one run over the final five frames. During that time there were several hotly-contested situations which left tempers simmering into the ninth inning.

After striking out the first two batters in the final inning, Rogers' offering was crushed for a triple by Tony Fricano. "I was just putting it in there and he ripped one," said Rogers of Fricano's blast over the center fielder's head, one of only two balls hit out of the infield all night.

The next Rogers' pitch was a strike to Jim Prandini, who had replaced Hopkins in the batting order after the fateful fourth. Prandini was also ejected in a dispute at the plate. And this second expulsion brought more fury from the Arlington side than earlier.

Ed Carpenter took Prandini's place at the plate and quickly became the 21st strikeout victim. Everyone who batted for Arlington went down at least once on a "K." The frustrations of those incidents and the specter of being eliminated led to many arguments which somewhat tarnished the championship contest.

Findlay actually sewed it up in the first inning with the help of a leadoff dropped fly ball in the infield. A stolen base later, Karl Wirtz singled in the eventual winning run.

Dale Swiger then followed with the first of two well-hit triples to right-center. Along with his run-batted-in in the first, Swiger had a seventh-inning shot to the base of the wall which scored the final run.

The winners might have scored more if it weren't for some fine fielding plays by Arlington. Three plays were exceptional:

"In the third with two out and the bases filled, shortstop Jim Locascio — coming through as usual — managed to smother a hard grounder and force the runner at second.

"In the fourth with one out, a runner tried to steal second on catcher Pat Broderick. Outstanding throughout the tourney behind the plate, Broderick pounced on the ball in the dirt and cut the runner down.

"In the fifth, third baseman Dave Zare — moving quickly to his left — handled a slow grounder between short and the mound and threw out the batter while on the run.

But Rogers and his team — now holders of a splendid 41-4 record (25 out of the last 26) — didn't need those other potential runs Rogers went on to strike out the side in four different innings and registered six called strikeouts. The only inning he didn't have more than one "K" was the second.

Findlay now advances to the nationals later this week in Memphis, Tenn.

Arlington finished with a 33-14 record and the second-place Regional trophy — accomplishments to be proud of.

Softball's King And Court Visit

"You don't have to be a softball fan to like the King and His Court, according to Eddie Feigner, founder, mentor and star performer of the diamond's awesome foursome.

"Some of our best fans are women, who think a strike is something you get when you bowl.

"Our bag is entertainment," says Feigner "and as long as we can make the fans laugh and cheer, we're happy."

The fun will begin at 7 o'clock on Sept. 12, 13 and 14th when the jolly jesters take on teams from Evanston at Thillens Stadium, Devon and Kedzie Avenues, in Chicago.

Pre-sale tickets of $2 are now on sale at the ball park after 6 p.m.

More than half a million fans a year turn out to watch the court entertain, but so far as opposing teams are concerned it is a game to be won. It would be quite a triumph to beat the court, especially when they have chalked up over 4900 victories while suffering less than 10 per cent of their games in defeat.

That record has been compiled since 1946, when Feigner — who is internationally famous as the World's Greatest Pitcher — founded his peerless organization. The four man team has brought their brand of comedy in softball to 49 states and have thrilled and delighted ball fans and non-fans on four continents.

situation Sunday evening when powerful Findlay, Ohio eliminated Arlington, 3-0, and advanced to the American Legion World Series.

Another Fascinating Summer Of Boys Baseball Reports

by LARRY EVERHART

IT'S THAT TIME of the year again to make an annual review of the highlights — and lowlights — of the past Little League season.

There are always an overflow of astounding and humorous facts reported from literally hundreds of leagues, thousands of teams and tens of thousands of players in the northwest suburban communities served by this newspaper.

Kids are and always have been unpredictable and that goes doubly when they're playing (or trying to play) baseball and when there are so many reports to pick from.

We're always thankful for the time and trouble of parents and scorekeepers in getting results to us to recognize achievements, so the following (is not meant as criticism. It's just that the more unusual reports serve as day-brighteners for this sports staff (while typing seeming mountainous stacks of accounts on summer days) and we like to share these light moments.

So without further adieu (as Ed Sullivan used to say), here is the third annual edition of "Best Of The Little League Reports."

HIGGEST SCORES

(Before starting on this category, let me assure you that every one of the following scores is for real.)

A Most One-Sided Scores

The granddaddy of all the slaughters this year and a new all-time (so far as we know) single-game scoring record for any organized (?) game occurred when the Orioles nipped the Robins 50-4 in a Hoffman Estates Girls Softball League.

Close behind and also up there on the all-time list of gems were these: Bisons 40, Darts 3 in the North Green Junior League of Arlington Heights; Vixens 42, Wildcats 10 in the Elk Grove Junior League; Giants 38, Lions 9 in the Bronco B Mount Prospect League; Sox 35, Braves 4 in the same loop; and Fox Insurance 32, Arlington Realty 3 in the Red Division of Palatine North.

Some of the other more noticeable scores were a pair of 28-2's, 26-1, 28-4, 27-4 and 25-5 (that last one almost seems like a squeaker by comparison).

B Best Slu fests:

The three games farthest from being pitchers' duels all came from the same league this year — the Ponytail League of the Hoffman Estates Athletic Association. The Ravens edged the Falcons 40-36 (each team was actually scoreless for one inning), the Cardinals outlasted the Orioles 30-29 and the Cardinals bombed the Ravens 40-19 (The Cards' lethal bats thus produced 70 runs on 106 hits in two games).

In the Waycuden Mustang League of the Des Plaines Boys Baseball Association, Barnaby's came from behind with 23 runs in the sixth inning and 11 in the seventh for a 42-20 triumph over Mr. Steak.

Other genuine scores were 21-19, 42-22, 18-16, 18-14 and 18-13 (The last three were almost commonplace in some leagues).

MOST RUNS

ON FEWEST HITS

In the 42-22 defensive battle mentioned above, there were just 19 hits for the total of 64 runs.

In an Arlington Heights American Varsity game, the Bobcats got 11 hits to the Penguins' three. The score, though, was 17-4 — in favor of the Penguins.

Two runs combined for 23 runs on one (1) hit. The Cubs were no-hit but trimmed the Cards (who got one hit), 12-11 in a Bronco B game in Mount Prospect.

In a South Blue Intermediate game in Arlington, the totals were: Dons, nine runs on three hits; Bearcats, six runs on two hits.

And in another Bronco B contest, the

MOST HILARIOUS (INTENDED OR NOT) REPORT SHEETS

For an 18-13 game that included 57 hits, the scorewriter wrote, "There were outstanding catches by three boys and one of them pitched three innings and struck out a few. The Giants played good. Our team has spirit and team togetherness, also trying for first place."

A 16-13 slugfest did not include the names of any boys getting hits, but did outline how two double plays were executed.

The 42-22 game had winning pitcher and losing pitcher as the only details mentioned.

The same lucky boy was credited as winning pitcher and winning catcher in the same game (He must be able to run very fast or else throw some awfully slow pitches).

Standings for one league added up to 10 wins and seven losses (that's a tough league) and for another the total was seven wins and nine losses.

One boy threw a two-hit shutout. "Ken C." is his name as reported to us.

In one game the winning team was credited for 21 hits with just five runs and the other 20 hits for four runs. (It couldn't possibly be that some of those "hits" were errors or walks, could it?)

One boy "was awarded the game ball for a terrific slide into home plate" in a 15-11 game.

Another player was reported to have stolen home five times in one game.

One scorekeeper listed as the only highlights a list of rosters and uniform numbers (presumably in case that team ever plays on television).

A game was cut short by darkness after three and one-half innings with a 23-15 score. Only one hitter was reported.

A certain name was called "outstanding player of the game." He must have been the scorekeeper's son because he did not pitch or get any hits.

Two boys on one team were reported to have hit grand-slam home runs in one game in which their team had only one inning with as many as four runs.

Three different reports were sent in on the game. One had only names of players on one team, the other had only players on the other team, and the third had no names at all.

MOST AWESOME

INDIVIDUAL PERFORMANCES

Jim Rance drove in 12 runs in one game as his team, the Blues, beat the Orange 28-2 in the Palatine Future Stars League.

Mike Ziellinski of the Comets of the Rolling Meadows Instructional League struck out every batter he faced in one game — 18 in six innings.

Hank Guaghanone drove in 12 runs with two homers and two triples in one game for the Pirates of the Rolling Meadows National Minor League.

In the best brother act of the season, the Brehms — Tim, Greg and Mark — all homered in the same game for A-1 Key Punch of the White Division of the Palatine North program.

Phil Lombardo pitched a perfect four-inning game and struck out 11 of 12 batters for the Indians of the American B League in Mount Prospect.

Dean Carpenter struck out 15 men in a row during a one-hit shutout for the Carpenters (who else?) in the West Major League in Des Plaines.

Doug Nelson had three home runs and 10 runs batted in for the Chicks of the North Green Juniors in Arlington Heights.

This is only a small sampling. I could go on and on, but I positively refuse to look at one more Little League report — until next May.

Continuing Education For Teachers On The Upswing

by BETSY BROOKER

More and more teachers are going back to school to add to their education, in many cases right in their hometown.

The upswing in continuing education is going hand in hand with a commitment from the universities to bring courses to neighborhood locations.

Acting as a liaison between the teachers and universities, the Northwest Education Cooperative (NEC) is redoubling its teacher training efforts.

Teacher training is only one of a variety of education programs operated by the 10 school district cooperative. Local members include districts 15, 21, 23, 25, 26, 57, 211 and 214.

THE NEC PROGRAM offers a variety of courses ranging from a state-funded bilingual program designed to train teachers how to work with bilingual students to a master's degree program offered as an extension in local locations.

In some cases NEC is cooperating with the state or a university to offer a program. In others, the cooperative is going strictly on its own and using local funds.

Teachers are requesting and attending the training programs for both professional and personal reasons. Generally the very nature of their profession demands they keep up with the latest innovations in education.

According to Gloria Kinney, NEC director, "It is a definite trend to see education as a continuing thing, and not completed at the end of four college years. Most school districts encourage their teachers to go back to college for additional training."

The ambitious teacher looking for advancement usually finds he has to go back to school to get a master's degree and administrator's certificate.

TEACHERS WHO may not be interested in joining the administrative ranks are going back to school to improve their skills in a specific area, such as learning disabilities, or just to fill an interest.

through tests, designing it, and telling teachers how to use it.

The bilingual program, beginning this fall, is the first of its kind in the state. The staff will probably use the same approach as the gifted program in working with school districts. If successful, the program will be set up in other state locations.

On a strictly local level, NEC offers summer workshops for teachers in areas such as science, math and learning disabilities. A university provides the professor and college credit for the tuition paid courses.

MSD Will Eye New Amendments

by ANNE SLAVICEK

Northwest suburban communities and local sanitary districts will have to inspect all sewer systems within their jurisdictions if proposed amendments to a Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) sewer permit ordinance and manual of procedures are approved by the district.

The new amendments, which the MSD board of trustees will consider Sept. 14, would require agencies which receive MSD permits for sewer construction to complete the inspections within one year after the amendment becomes effective.

The required inspections would include checking all buildings to find any downspouts or roof drains which are connected, either directly or indirectly, to sanitary sewers. The municipality would then be responsible for seeing that any such illegal connections were eliminated.

The new amendment would also require municipalities and sanitary districts to inspect visually the sanitary sewer systems over which they have jurisdiction in an effort to find places where storm water flows into sanitary sewers.

Storm water often gets into sanitary sewer systems through leaking or open manholes, illegal stormwater connections or because of problems at creek and ditch crossings and other points of storm sewer connections and overflows.

The amendment would require inspections during both wet and dry weather periods. Municipalities and local sanitary districts would be required to make sure any such illegal connections found in the inspections were eliminated.

Quarterly reports of the inspections required in the new amendment would have to be submitted to the MSD by the municipalities and local sanitary districts.

The new amendment would also retain the MSD's power to seek out and eliminate illegal connections of storm water into sanitary sewers.

Other changes in the district's sewer permit ordinance and manual of procedures incorporated into the amendments include:

—Allowing the MSD to issue permits for sewer construction to "responsible individuals" as determined by the MSD board, so that individuals or corporations in unincorporated areas could provide their own sewer systems.

—Raising the fine for violation of the ordinance from an automatic $100 fine to a fine of from $100 to $1,000

—Allowing the MSD board to waive the ordinance requirements in specific cases after a hearing.

—Requiring minimum maintenance of sewers serving single residential buildings of less than 25 dwelling units even though such sewers can be built without an MSD permit.

—Banning the connection of window wells or area-way drains to any sanitary sewer.

—Changing wording of a section encouraging stormwater detention by local governments and developers to include basins that are dry except in peak rainfall periods as well as lake basins.

—Adding a statement that comprehensive planning of flood control, "is far more beneficial than the proliferation of small, on-site detention areas."

—Eliminating stormwater detention requirements for any residential plat recorded prior to Jan. 1, 1972 unless the property is resubdivided after that date.

Universities are finding it an opportune time to meet the continuing education demand because, in many cases, their undergraduate enrollment is decreasing. In addition the Illinois Board of Higher Education is encouraging the universities to take time off from research to provide field service for working teachers.

NEC is right in the middle of the continuing education move and approaching it from several angles.

The cooperative is acting as a direct agent of the state in offering two teacher training programs, one for bilingual students and one for gifted students. Because the state pays for the programs, they are available to any teacher in the state, but most accessible to teachers in the NEC area.

In its second year, the gifted program helps teachers develop programs for a specific type of student or curriculum. For example, the program might be designed to teach accelerated music or the inquiry process of evaluating and interpreting facts.

THE TRAINING personnel, headquartered at the Dist. 25 Administration Center, go to a district upon request. The program is flexible in that the district decides what type of program they want and how much help they need from the NEC staff. The staff could do everything from determining the need of a program

FOR THE TEACHER who wants to earn college credit during the school year, NEC is sponsoring several courses ranging from achievement motivation to reading. In the past the cooperative has offered only a few courses which were requested by the teachers. Now, after surveying the teachers' interests, NEC will boost the selection.

Another new addition this fall will be a master's degree program credited with Northern Illinois University. The courses are offered in a sequence over a two year period in local areas. Teachers must take the second half of the degree credits on the university campus during the school year or summer.

A new NEC staff development committee, composed of member district administrators and NEC personnel, are coordinating the college credit programs. They surveyed the teachers and plan to compile a directory of education courses offered locally, either as extensions or on nearby college campuses.

Teachers Favor Back To School Move

Almost all the 1,445 teachers surveyed in eight local districts say they are interested in going back to school for more

college credits

The survey was conducted by a committee of school administrators from districts belonging to the Northwest Education Cooperative. Based on the teachers' responses, NEC will offer a variety of university extension courses this fall.

Elk Grove High Band Wins Grand Trophy

The Elk Grove High School Band has been awarded the Grand Trophy for the outstanding performance by an organization at the 1972 Illinois State Fair Music Concert-Contest.

Forty-two high schools and junior high schools performed during the week of Aug. 12 to 19 in a competition for the trophy which was formerly known as the Governor's Trophy.

Douglas E. Peterson, band director, learned of the award via a telephone conversation with Frank Laurie, state director of music education. Peterson told members of the band as they were preparing last week to travel to Chicago for Saturday's riverfront parade, part of that city's annual Waterfront Festival. This was the fifth year the Elk Grove group has participated in the State Fair competition.

Also competing at the fair was the Rolling Meadows High School Band, under the direction of Lendell King. They received a First Division Rating for their performance. Rolling Meadows has only been open for one year, and one-half of the band members are freshmen.

Both schools are in Township High School Dist. 214.

A majority of the teachers were between 21 and 30 years of age, do not have a master's degree and are not enrolled in a degree program. Their future plans are to continue with their present assignment but also earn additional college credits.

THE TEACHERS were most interested in specialized graduate courses including: achievement motivation, behavior modification, individualized instruction, teaching gifted children, guidance, learning disabilities, open schools and reading remediation. All of these courses will be sponsored by NEC this fall.

Those wanting to earn an advanced degree cited academics, special education and elementary education as their interests.

'A Night Of Exploration'

by DOROTHY OLIVER

I sat crossed-legged on the floor — my knees, back and elbows bumping into their bodies. More than 230 women shared the auditorium with me last week and despite the close quarters and billows of cigarette smoke that were filling the room, there was an atmosphere of excitement, curiosity and anticipation.

We were attending a program by the Postgraduate Center at Forest Hospital, Des Plaines, introducing women to a proposed 10-week series which will explore "Who am I, what am I and what do I want to be?" This program was called "We As Women: A Night of Exploration" and the audience had been promised a film and an opportunity to share feelings and experiences.

Anita, social therapist who planned this program and the series, sat in wonderment as the women streamed into the auditorium. When she first conceived the idea, she questioned whether area women would show any interest.

"I WAS ECSTATIC at the response. I originally expected 30 or maybe 50 women. I think the number who did turn out indicates that somewhere along the line ... we hit a nerve. Each had a reason for coming ... curiosity, to see the movie, to find out more about themselves," she said.

They had come from all over the north and northwest suburbs. Attendance lists were signed Miss, Mrs. and Ms. with addresses in Evanston, Palatine, Northbrook, Chicago, Barrington and every suburb in between. There were women of every age — from 17 to nearly 70 — thrown together for this experience.

We received an enthusiastic welcome from Anita. Then she explained her goals for this evening and the series. We would see a film, "Growing Up Female," and draw our own conclusions; we would break up into groups after the film to discuss our reactions; we would share feelings, thoughts and experiences. We were women joining with other women for a better understanding of what it is to be a woman.

"GROWING UP FEMALE" filled the screen and each sat back to watch the story of six women in six stages of life unfold. We saw the child at nursery school and heard her teacher describe the difference between little boys and little girls. Boys, she explained, are rougher, friendlier with each other, more active. Girls already show jealousy, they have a shorter attention span, they flit from one thing to another, and busy themselves with girl things.

We watched the 11-year-old tomboy bursting with curiosity, dancing with girls, giggling, jumping creeks, exploring life. We heard her mother tell how she is trying to get her daughter to wear dresses and show some interest in boys. Her father explained the importance of femininity.

We watched a 16-year-old (who was planning to be married by "19 or 20 at the maximum") attend her classes at a vocational school. We saw her in cosmetology class and heard her instructor expound on the importance of beauty and being feminine. We saw her in a marriage counseling course and heard her teacher explain some of the rules of marriage: "You let him make the decisions. Of course you try to help, talk about it but the decision is his ... You take care of him, do the laundry, keep the house ... You remember that he is tired after a day of making a living ..."

THE PROJECTOR broke down before the second half of the movie could be shown but Anita described the other three women we would have seen. There was the 18-year-old who had moved from her small town to the big city. Everything was "cool and groovy" living alone. Everything was "buy the groovy clothes and do the groovy things." In contrast an advertising executive explained how women are "suckered" into buying their products and the data processing manager explained how perfect women were for the dull, tedious, boring job of key punching.

There was the black woman, living alone with her child, who had to work and leave her child in a day care center. She talked of her guilt, her desire to be married again, her feelings of loneliness. There was the middle-aged mother who lived a common life and spoke of her dislike for housework, her dull routine. When asked if she would change something if she could, she answered simply, "I wouldn't get married."

WE BROKE INTO groups — each of us touched by some part of the movie. It provided a good stimulus for discussion. A social therapist led each group, trying to keep things going smoothly while allowing each person an opportunity to be heard.

"There was a lot of curiosity, excitement, listening, sharing, and opening up in my group," Anita said. "At one point we got into a discussion of men and I stepped in and tried to prevent playing the 'blaming game.' When we got to the point where we agreed that we were not talking about women's lib but human lib, we were okay. Instead of blaming we decided to start from this point and move on."

Other groups experienced similar discussions. My group contained several angry, hostile women who wanted to be human beings and felt they were kept from it. There also were women who were what they wanted to be, those who were working steadily towards it and those who hadn't given any thought to who they were or why.

The discussions went on — long past the 10:30 p.m. scheduled closing. There was laughter as one woman explained how she identified with the tomboy while another found she identified with that tomboy's mother. There was concern for the woman who was trying to talk to her husband about the changes taking place in her and receiving no caring or understanding. There was hostility shown towards the woman who seemed to think she had all the answers.

SIXTY-FIVE WOMEN signed up for the 10-week series designed to help them resolve some of the conflicts they face while exploring more deeply who they are. Again, Anita reacted with total excitement at the response.

"As we sat there talking, a lot of personal stories were told — there were women who needed an answer, they were asking for help and we couldn't stop and do problem solving. The series will give us that chance. They will continue as long as there is an interest," she said.

Consciousness-raising sessions are becoming a big part of the woman's lib movement. Women sit in a group with their peers telling their stories, sharing good and bad feelings, relying on each other for support and, often, guidance.

"Intellectually we can know a lot about what we think we are but I strongly believe that we have to feel it in order for it to be true," said Anita.

The 10-week series will deal on a similar intellectual level as a consciousness-raising session but the important difference will be that trained therapists will be present and group systems will be used to facilitate problem solving. It will be an opportunity to discuss, decide and resolve.

Music Teacher Weds Army Captain

It was while Leah Jean Anderson was traveling through Europe in 1969 that she met the man she was to marry later. David Elliott Hunter was stationed in Germany with the U.S. Army, but the couple met in England while both were visiting there.

Capt. and Mrs. David E. Hunter

After each of them returned to the states, they eventually came to live and work in this area. Leah, daughter of the Leo Andersons of New, Kan., is a music teacher for Dist. 25 schools in Arlington Heights and has been living in Mount Prospect.

David has been working for the State of Illinois, Division of Water Resources Management, in Maywood and living in Des Plaines. Recently he was recalled to active duty as a captain in the army and will report to Ft. Knox, Ky., by Sept. 1, taking his bride along.

DAVID IS the son of John Hunter of Bicknell, Ind., and the late Mrs. Hunter.

The couple exchanged vows and rings by candlelight Aug. 19 in North Side Christian Church, Chicago. Afterwards, there was a reception in the church hall for 140 guests.

For the afternoon nuptials, the bride wore a nylon organza gown trimmed with bands of Venise lace. It was designed with a high neck, lantern sleeves and chapel train. A matching cap held the bride's short bouffant veil in place, and her bouquet was of yellow roses, white carnations and fuchsia mums, the latter tipped a misty blue.

Her bouquet matched the ensembles worn by her three attendants. They appeared in Empire styled dresses in a pale aqua and carried yellow and white daisies.

Madeline Sauerbier of Mount Prospect was maid of honor; Betty Jo Mulberry, the bride's roommate, and Suzanne Anderson of Arlington Heights were bridesmaids.

ALSO IN THE bridal party were Sheila Seville, 5, of Leland, Ill., as flower girl and Christopher Cazzell, 4, of Bloomington, Ind., ring bearer. The young flower girl was dressed as a miniature of the other attendants.

Walter Marczak of Connersville, Ind., was David's best man, while Willard Cazzell, Bloomington, Ind., and Tommy Mosely, Silver Springs, Md., were groomsmen. The bride's brother Jeffrey Anderson of West Point, N. Y., ushered.

The newlyweds spent a week's honeymoon in the Smoky Mountains before getting ready to leave for Ft. Knox. Leah is a graduate of Wichita State University and has a master's in music education from the University of Illinois. Her husband is an engineering graduate of Purdue University.

Local Man Weds Wisconsin Girl

Martha Louise Gaertner and Jeffrey Edward Burkart, who began their romance at Concordia Teachers College, River Forest, Ill., became man and wife in a 4 p.m. ceremony Aug. 13 at Zion Lutheran Church, New Holstein, Wis.

Martha is the daughter of Mrs. Heinrich Gaertner and the late Mr. Gaertner of New Holstein. Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Burkart, 9701 Elms Terr., Des Plaines.

The Rev. Victor Kuerschner and the Rev. Harold Teuscher, both of Battle Creek, Mich., presided over the ceremony.

The bride chose a silk organza over taffeta A-line gown with Empire bodice, elbow-length sleeves and full train. A pearl and lace cap held her silk illusion veil. She carried a golden bouquet of white roses and blue forget-me-nots.

MRS. JUDITH CHRISTIAN, Fort Wayne, Ind., was maid of honor. Bridesmaids included Mrs. Daniel Yahn, Milwaukee; Mrs. Ronald Reek, Sauk Ste. Marie, Mich.; and Nancy Kiel, Arlington Heights; and Nancy Hileman, Chicago.

The attendants wore princess styled gowns of blue floral print with wide avocado braid trim. They carried Colonial bouquets of daisies, carnations and forget-me-nots.

Larry Vedder, Baltimore, Md., was best man. Groomsmen included Daniel Gaertner, brother of the bride from New Holstein; Richard Howard, Chicago; Thomas Lorenz, Kansas City, Kan.

Mrs. Jeffrey E. Burkart

A reception was held following the ceremony at Harlee's Altona, New Holstein.

The new Mr. and Mrs. Burkart are both 1971 graduates of Concordia. She is employed as a second grade teacher at Pilgrim Lutheran School, Wauwatosa, Wis., and he is a teacher at Martin Luther High School, Greendale, Wis. They are making their home in Greenfield, Wis.

Officer Installation

Ninth District American Legion Auxiliary, Department of Illinois, will hold installation of officers at 8 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 9, in River Grove School, River Grove.

Mrs. Bud Leder, River Grove, will be installed as president.

Suburban Living

ESPECIALLY FOR THE FAMILY

Dear Dorothy: My next-door neighbor is most generous with the green peppers that he grows. However, you can have stuffed green peppers just so often before the family starts complaining. Can I freeze them? —Dorothea S.

They freeze beautifully. Clean them, chop them up and put into clean cottage cheese cartons, a piece of foil between each layer. The peppers can be used in cooking the rest of the year and even be crisp enough to put into salads if added to the greens just before serving.

Dear Dorothy: A window was inadvertently left open; it stormed and my lined draperies have water marks on them. Is there anything that can be done about these very noticeable marks? —Mrs. James Samuel.

Generally, these are the worst kinds of permanent stains. It happened to me once so I took off the lining and washed the draperies in tepid water with a delicate soap flake solution. They did beautifully but not all draperies take to water.

Dear Dorothy: We have a concrete floor in our basement. Is there a paint which could be used now which would not interfere with our future plans of laying tile on this floor? —Mrs. John Fetsic.

If you are definitely planning on tile, don't paint. This is simply because all the paint will have to come off when it comes time to lay tile.

Dear Dorothy: To keep the robins and other birds out of the berry trees, try putting a three-foot length of black rubber hose in the branches. The birds apparently think the hose is a snake and won't light and dine. —Martha M. Pearson.

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

Altar Bound

Mr. and Mrs. James Willison of Des Plaines announce the engagement of their daughter, Lynn, to Roger Pump, son of Mrs. Lorraine Pump of Des Plaines and the late George Pump.

The bride-to-be attended Maine West High School. She is employed by Great Lakes Car Distributors, Elk Grove Village.

Her fiancé also attended Maine West High School. He is employed by Corra Plumbing Co., Rolling Meadows.

A date has not yet been set for the wedding.

School Bells To Ring For Clubwomen, Too

The kids won't be the only ones who go back to school next week.

For hundreds of women's club presidents and news chairman school bells will ring Thursday, Sept. 7, and Friday, Sept. 8. These are the dates set for the Herald's ninth annual capsule news course for presidents and publicity chairmen of women's groups whose news is published in the women's pages of the Herald.

There's no matriculation fee, and the course, while informative also has its moments of merriment.

"Never a dull moment and the presentations were great!" wrote one of the women after last year's class. "I would have been in my job as publicity chairman if it hadn't been for your workshop," stated another.

A BIT OF nourishment will also be included during the sessions which open at 9 a.m. and close at 11:30. However, instead of cookies and milk, "coffee and" will be substituted. And of course there'll be "diplomas" for all.

The capsule course will cover the ABCs of writing club news releases and the low down on pictures. A helpful pamphlet will be given to those in attendance and it is expected that there will be a time for a question and answer period, too. Of special interest will be the slide presentation during the session on photo coverage.

Thursday's class will be meeting in the Plum Grove Club, Plum Grove Estates, Palatine, and Friday's class will be meeting in the Northwest Suburban YMCA, Northwest Hwy., Des Plaines. "Students" may attend whichever is more convenient.

However, so that there will be seating and rolls for all, reservations are requested. Clubwomen may call Paddock Publications at 394-2300, Extension 233, or the Des Plaines office, 297-6633.

Next On The Agenda

GARDEN CLUB
Thursday, Sept. 7, will open the fall season for the Des Plaines Garden Club when members gather at Rand Park Fieldhouse for a program on using fresh plant material with driftwood.

Mrs. Jerome Thelander, nationally accredited flower show judge who holds a fifth degree certificate in the Ikenobo School of Ikebana and past president of the Mount Prospect Garden Club, will present the 12:30 p.m. program.

Horticulture chairman Mrs. Richard Wisniewski will give tips on the proper methods of potting plant material from the summer garden, as interesting house plants.

Hostess for the day is Mrs. Gunnar Adler and her assistants are Mrs. Allen Wilson, Mrs. Maynard Coe and Mrs. Leonard Bell.

Board members of the club were the guests of Mrs. Floyd Stebbins, environmental and civic improvement chairman, Aug. 29. Programs for the coming year are listed in the club's yearbook which will be mailed to members by Mrs. Richard Butler upon receipt of their dues.

Successful Blind Date

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ribnek of Westchester, Ill., thought they were making a good match when they brought Ellen Elaine Both and Richard Lester Lavicka together for a blind date in October, 1971. Ellen and Richard must have thought so too for that first meeting led to their marriage July 22, performed at Good Shepherd Lutheran Church, Des Plaines.

Ellen, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Both, 1857 Sycamore St., Des Plaines, and Richard, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lavicka Sr., Broadview, Ill., asked the Rev. Herbert Nagel to preside over the 4:30 p.m. double ring ceremony.

The bride chose a silk organza and beaded Alencon lace gown with Victorian collar and bishop sleeves. The A-line skirt and detachable train were bordered with the lace. Her fingertip English illusion veil was held by a headpiece of Alencon lace. She carried a cascade of lilies, stephanotis and ivy.

ESTHER ANN BANNIER, Arlington Heights, maid of honor, attended the bride with bridesmaids Mrs. Linda Both, sister-in-law of the bride from Mount Prospect; Mrs. Nancy Goellner, sister of the groom from Broadview; and Mrs. Ribnek.

The attendants formed a rainbow of colors in their floor length gowns which featured square necklines, full sleeves and three-tiered full skirts of georgette fabric gently gathered with a band of Venise lace. Esther wore light blue, Linda wore orchid, Nancy chose yellow, Kathy selected green and 2½-year-old Melissa Both, the bride's niece from Mount Prospect who was flower girl, wore pink.

Esther carried a white wicker umbrella filled with white daisies and blue baby's breath while the three bridesmaids carried daisies which matched their dresses and white baby's breath in their umbrellas. Little Melissa carried a white basket of pink daisies and white baby's breath and wore a wreath of the same flowers in her hair.

ATTENDING THE groom were Frank C. Lavicka Jr., brother of the groom from Broadview, as best man and ushers Melvin Both, brother of the bride from Mount Prospect; Emil Goellner III, brother-in-law of the groom from Broadview; and Edward Ribnek, Gordon Both, 5-year-old nephew of the bride from Mount Prospect, was ring bearer for the couple.

A reception for 225 guests was held at Catania's Jolly Club, Chicago. Following the reception the couple left for an 11-day honeymoon in Los Angeles and Hawaii.

Ellen is a graduate of Maine West High School and is employed with United Air Lines, Elk Grove. Richard is a Proviso East graduate and is employed with J. D. Pearson Typewriters, Bellwood, Ill.

They will make their home in Lombard.
